

No. 91615-2

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE STATE OF WASHINGTON

STATE OF WASHINGTON,

Respondent,

v.

ARLENE'S FLOWERS, INC., d/b/a ARLENE'S FLOWERS AND GIFTS, and BARRONELLE STUTZMAN,

Appellants.

ROBERT INGERSOLL, et al.

Respondents,

v.

ARLENE'S FLOWERS, INC., d/b/a ARLENE'S FLOWERS AND GIFTS, and BARRONELLE STUTZMAN,

Appellants.

BRIEF OF AMICUS CURIAE
WASHINGTON STATE ASSOCIATION FOR JUSTICE

Donovan Flora, #5624
Johnson Flora, PLLC
2505 Second Avenue, #500
Seattle, WA 98121
donovan@johnsonflora.com

Judith A. Lonnquist, #6421
Law Office of Judith A. Lonnquist
1218 Third Avenue, #1500
Seattle, WA 98101
lojal@aol.com

Rebecca Roe, #7560
Schroeter Goldmark & Bender
810 Third Avenue, #500
Seattle, WA 98104
roe@sgb-law.com

Ian S. Birk, #31431
Keller Rohrback, LLP
1201 Third Avenue, #3200
Seattle, WA 98101
ibirk@kellerrohrback.com

On Behalf of the Washington State Association for Justice

TABLE OF CONTENTS

	Page
I. IDENTITY AND INTEREST OF AMICUS CURIAE	1
II. INTRODUCTION	1
III. ISSUES ADDRESSED	5
IV. ARGUMENT	6
A. Making and Selling Flower Arrangements Is Not Speech ..	6
1. Arlene’s Makes No Gunwall Argument That State Free-Speech Protection Differs From Federal Protection In This Case.	6
2. Arlene’s Does Not Identify A Particular Message An Observer Would Likely Understand.	7
3. Case Law Does Not Support The Argument That Flower Arrangements Implicate First Amendment Protection.	9
B. WLAD Does Not Compel Arlene’s To Speak, Accommodate Or Endorse Any Message Regarding Same-Sex Marriage.	13
C. The Standard Of Review Is Not Strict Scrutiny	16
V. CONCLUSION	19
CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE	20

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

	Page
Cases
Anderson v. City of Hermosa Beach , 621 F.3d 1051 (9th Cir. 2010)	11
Barnes v. Glen Theatre, Inc. , 501 U.S. 560, 111 S.Ct. 2456, 115 L.Ed.2d 504 (1991)	12
Church of the Lukumi Babalu Aye, Inc. v. City of Hialeah , 508 U.S. 520, 113 S.Ct. 2217, 124 L.Ed.2d 472 (1993)	17
City of Dallas v. Stanglin , 490 U.S. 19, 109 S.Ct. 1591, 104 L.Ed.2d 18 (1989)	3
City of Erie v. Pap's A.M. , 529 U.S. 277, 120 S.Ct. 1382, 146 L.Ed.2d 265 (2000)	12
Clark v. Cmty. for Creative Non-Violence , 468 U.S. 288, 104 S.Ct. 3065, 82 L.Ed.2d 221 (1984)	5,7
Combs v. Homer-Ctr. Sch. Dist. , 540 F.3d 231 (3d Cir. 2008)	17
Craig v. Masterpiece Cakeshop, Inc. , __ P.3d __, 2015 WL 4760453 (Colo. App. 2015)	2
Cressman v. Thompson , 719 F.3d 1139 (10th Cir. 2013)	3
Elane Photography, LLC v. Willock , 309 P.3d 53 (N.M. 2013)	2,14-16
Employment Div., Oregon Dep't of Human Res. v. Smith , 494 U.S. 872, 110 S.Ct. 1595, 108 L.Ed.2d 876 (1990)	16,17
First Covenant Church of Seattle v. City of Seattle , 120 Wn.2d 203, 840 P.2d 174 (1993)	17

Gitlow v. New York , 268 U.S. 652, 45 S.Ct. 625, 69 L.Ed. 1138 (1925)	7
Grace United Methodist Church v. City of Cheyenne , 451 F.3d 643 (10th Cir. 2006)	17
Holland v. City of Tacoma , 90 Wn. App. 533, 954 P.2d 290 (1998),	5
Hurley v. Irish-Am. Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Grp. of Boston , 515 U.S. 557, 115 S.Ct. 2338, 132 L.Ed.2d 487 (1995) ...	9,10,12
Ino Ino, Inc. v. City of Bellevue , 132 Wn.2d 103, 937 P.2d 154, 943 P.2d 1358 (1997).....	6,12,18
Joseph Burstyn, Inc. v. Wilson , 343 U.S. 495, 72 S.Ct. 777, 96 L.Ed. 1098 (1952)	10
Kaahumanu v. Hawaii , 682 F.3d 789 (9th Cir. 2012)	8
Kaplan v. California , 413 U.S. 115, 93 S.Ct. 2680, 37 L.Ed. 2d 492 (1973)	10
Kissinger v. Bd. of Trs. of Ohio State Univ. , 5 F.3d 177 (6th Cir. 1993)	17
Marquis v. City of Spokane , 130 Wn.2d 97, 922 P.2d 43 (1996)	19
Miami Herald Publ'g Co. v. Tornillo , 418 U.S. 241, 94 S.Ct. 2831, 41 L.Ed.2d 730 (1974)	15
Miller v. California , 413 U.S. 15, 93 S.Ct. 2607, 37 L.Ed.2d 419 (1973)	10
Miller v. Reed , 176 F.3d 1202 (9th Cir. 1999)	18

Minersville School Dist. Bd. Of Ed. v. Gobitis , 310 U.S. 586, 60 S.Ct. 1010, 84 L.Ed. 1375 (1940)	16
Nevada Commission on Ethics v. Carrigan , 564 U.S. 117, 131 S.Ct. 2343, 180 L.Ed.2d 150 (2011)	4
O'Day v. King County , 109 Wn.2d 796, 749 P.2d 142 (1988)	5
Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Pub. Utils. Comm'n of California , 475 U.S. 1, 106 S.Ct. 903, 89 L.Ed.2d 1 (1986)	15
Piarowski v. Ill. Cmty. Coll. Dist. 515 , 759 F.2d 625 (7th Cir. 1985)	11
Rumsfeld v. Forum for Academic and Institutional Rights, Inc. , 547 U.S. 47, 126 S.Ct. 1297, 164 L.Ed.2d (2006)	13-15
San Jose Christian Coll. v. City of Morgan Hill , 360 F.3d 1024 (9th Cir. 2004)	17-18
Southeastern Promotions, Ltd. v. Conrad , 420 U.S. 546, 95 S.Ct. 1239, 43 L.Ed. 2d 448 (1975)	12
Spence v. Washington , 418 U.S. 405, 94 S.Ct. 2727, 41 L.Ed.2d 842 (1974)	2,3,9
State v. Davis , 141 Wn.2d 798, 10 P.3d 977 (2000)	7
State v. Gunwall , 106 Wn.2d 54, 720 P.2d 808 (1986)	7,17
State v. Immelt , 173 Wn.2d 1, 267 P.3d 305 (2011)	3
Texas v. Johnson , 491 U.S. 397, 109 S.Ct. 2533, 105 L.Ed.2d 342 (1989)	2,3,14
United States v. O'Brien , 391 U.S. 367, 88 S.Ct. 1673, 20 L.Ed.2d 672 (1968)	passim

Ward v. Rock Against Racism , 491 U.S. 781, 109 S.Ct. 2746, 105 L.Ed.2d 661 (1989)	12
White v. City of Sparks , 500 F.3d 953 (9th Cir. 2007)	10,11

Rules

GR 14.1(b)	2
------------------	---

Constitutional Provisions

U.S. Const. amend I	passim
U.S. Const. amend XIV.....	7
Wash. Const. art. I, § 5	6
Wash. Const. art. I, § 11	17

Statutes

Chapter RCW 49.60 (WLAD)	passim
RCW 49.60.010	18

I. IDENTITY AND INTEREST OF AMICUS CURIAE

The Washington State Association for Justice (WSAJ) is a not-for-profit corporation, first organized under Washington law in 1967. WSAJ is comprised of more than 2400 attorneys throughout Washington whose focus is representing people who are injured or harmed by the negligence or misconduct of others.

WSAJ's interests include equal protection under the law including the right to be free from discrimination. WSAJ is therefore interested in the proper interpretation and application of the Washington Law Against Discrimination, chapter 49.60 RCW (WLAD), which prohibits discrimination not only in public accommodations, but also in matters involving employment, real estate, credit transactions and insurance. WSAJ has a particular interest in whether a Washington business can avoid application of the WLAD by cloaking its discriminatory practices under a mantle of free speech. WSAJ will address only issues related to First Amendment free speech.

II. INTRODUCTION

Alliance Defending Freedom, representing Arlene's Flowers in this case, is going for a same-sex wedding trifecta, of sorts. It has attempted to create a religion-based exemption from anti-discrimination laws in New Mexico for wedding photos,¹ in Colorado for wedding cakes² and, now, in Washington for wedding flowers. In all three cases, Alliance Defending Freedom has argued, in part, that making wedding photos or cakes or flower arrangements constitutes artistic expression entitled to First Amendment protection as speech.

Arlene's Flowers (hereafter "Arlene's") makes its "artistic expression" argument with no meaningful citation to First Amendment case law and without any analysis about why this Court should expand First Amendment protection to cover flower arrangements.

Unquestionably, the First Amendment protects more than the spoken or written word. But for expressive or symbolic conduct to come within First Amendment free-speech protection, it must first be determined whether "particular conduct possesses sufficient communicative elements to bring the First Amendment into play...." Texas v. Johnson, 491 U.S. 397, 404, 109 S. Ct. 2533, 105 L. Ed. 2d 342 (1989). Johnson applied the two-prong test established in Spence v. Washington, 418 U.S. 405, 409-10, 94 S. Ct. 2727, 41 L. Ed. 2d 842 (1974) (per curiam): (1) whether an intent to convey a particularized message was present, and (2) whether the likelihood was great that the message would be understood by those who viewed it.

¹ Elane Photography, LLC v. Willock, 309 P.3d 53 (N.M. 2013), cert. denied, __ U.S. __, 134 S.Ct. 1787 (2014).

² Craig v. Masterpiece Cakeshop, Inc., __ P.3d __, 2015 WL 4760453 (Colo. App. 2015) (unpublished opinion pending petition for cert. in Colorado Supreme Court, Case No. 2015SC000738, filed Oct. 23, 2015. This opinion is not cited as authority. In accordance with GR 14.1(b), a copy of the opinion is appended to this brief.

The Spence-Johnson test remains the central framework for analyzing questions about whether the “expression of an idea through activity,” Spence, 418 U.S. at 411, is sufficiently communicative to constitute “speech” for First Amendment purposes. See Cressman v. Thompson, 719 F.3d 1139, 1147-51 (10th Cir. 2013); cf. State v. Immelt, 173 Wn.2d 1, 16-20, 267 P.3d 305 (2011) (Madsen, C.J., dissenting) (“[T]he first step ... is to examine the challenger’s particular conduct to determine whether protected speech is at issue.”)

The rationale for Spence-Johnson analysis is to separate mere conduct from expressive conduct. As explained in United States v. O’Brien, 391 U.S. 367, 376, 88 S. Ct. 1673, 20 L. Ed. 2d 672 (1968), “We cannot accept the view that an apparently limitless variety of conduct can be labeled ‘speech’ whenever the person engaging in the conduct intends thereby to express an idea.” The Court in City of Dallas v. Stanglin, 490 U.S. 19, 25, 109 S. Ct. 1591, 104 L. Ed. 2d 18 (1989), in holding that social dances do not constitute “expressive association” protected by the First Amendment, stated:

[F]reedom of speech means more than simply the right to talk and to write. It is possible to find some kernel of expression in almost every activity a person undertakes – for example, walking down the street or meeting one’s friends at a shopping mall – but such a kernel is not sufficient to bring the activity within the protection of the First Amendment.

Similarly, in rejecting the argument that a state legislator has a free-speech right to vote on a particular matter despite the legislator’s conflict of interest, the Court stated “the fact that a nonsymbolic act is the product of deeply held personal belief – even if the actor would like it to convey his deeply held personal belief – does not transform action into First Amendment speech.” Nevada Comm’n on Ethics v. Carrigan, 564 U.S. 117, 131 S. Ct. 2343, 2350, 180 L. Ed. 2d 150 (2011) (emphasis in original).

In lieu of legal authority or analysis, and in an effort to shoehorn flower arrangements into protected First Amendment expression, Arlene’s cites the advertising slogan, “Say it with flowers,” and quotes a dictionary definition of “art.” Appellants’ Br. at 25. First Amendment case law, however, requires more than an actor’s belief that her flower arrangement is something more than decorative. Arlene’s has failed to meet its most basic burden of demonstrating that her flower arrangements do in fact say something that an observer would likely understand.³

In Holland v. City of Tacoma, 90 Wn. App. 533, 954 P.2d 290 (1998), the court relied on O'Day v. King County, 109 Wn.2d 796, 810, 749 P.2d 142 (1988), in stating that one challenging government regulation “must have at least a colorable claim that the regulation involves expression.” Arlene’s has not revealed a “colorable claim” to First Amendment protection.

III. ISSUES ADDRESSED

1. Whether Arlene’s has met its burden of demonstrating that wedding flower arrangements involve “artistic expression” that qualifies as protected “speech” under the First Amendment;

2. If free-speech analysis is warranted, whether WLAD results in “compelled speech,” meaning that the statute requires Arlene’s either to personally speak the government’s message or, alternatively, to host or accommodate another speaker’s message; and

³ Clark v. Cmty. for Creative Non-Violence, 468 U.S. 288, 293 n.5, 104 S. Ct. 3065, 82 L. Ed. 2d 221 (1984) (“Although it is common to place the burden upon the Government to justify impingements on First Amendment interests, it is the obligation of the person desiring to engage in assertedly expressive conduct to demonstrate that the First Amendment even applies.”)

3. If WLAD restricts the “speech” of Arlene’s, whether that restriction is nonetheless constitutional because (1) it furthers an important or substantial government interest, (2) the government restriction is unrelated to suppression of free expression, and (3) incidental restriction on First Amendment freedoms is no greater than essential to the furtherance of the government interest.

IV. ARGUMENT

A. Making and Selling Flower Arrangements Is Not Speech.

1. Arlene’s Makes No Gunwall Argument That State Free-Speech Protection Differs From Federal Protection In This Case.

Arlene’s mentions free speech protection under Washington’s Constitution and cites Article 1, section 5 of the Constitution, which provides, “Every person may freely speak, write and publish on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of that right.” Appellants’ Br. at 24. This Court has held that Article 1, section 5 is subject to interpretation independent from free-speech analysis under the First Amendment. Ino Ino, Inc. v. City of Bellevue, 132 Wn.2d 103, 115, 937 P.2d 154, 943 P.2d 1358 (1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1077 (1998).

Arlene’s, however, does not argue that free-speech analysis under our state constitution differs in this case from analysis under the federal constitution, and all the case law it cites in connection with its free-speech argument is federal.⁴ Moreover, Arlene's does not discuss the factors enunciated in State v. Gunwall, 106 Wn.2d 54, 720 P.2d 808 (1986), used to determine whether the Washington Constitution might provide a different result than its federal counterpart. This Court will not address a claim that the Washington Constitution guarantees more protection than the federal constitution unless there is adequate briefing and argument on the Gunwall factors. State v. Davis, 141 Wn.2d 798, 834, 10 P.3d 977 (2000) (regarding Sixth Amendment fair-trial guarantee). Thus, the only free-speech claim cognizable in this case is under the First Amendment.

2. Arlene's Does Not Identify A Particular Message
An Observer Would Likely Understand.

Arlene's has the threshold burden of showing that making and selling flower arrangements is expressive conduct entitled to free-speech analysis. Clark, 468 U.S. at 293 n.5. It claims its flower arrangements are "artistic expressions." There is, however, no case authority anywhere for the proposition that an "artistic expression," per se, is constitutionally protected activity. Although Arlene's tries to draw a connection to traditional art by claiming that people ("artists") have arranged flowers for centuries and famous painters have painted flower arrangements, Appellants' Br. at 24, 25, those points have no connection to the argument. Even a long history of a non-artistic activity has no apparent relevance to whether the activity should be redefined as art within First Amendment analysis. While a painting may constitute protected expression, the fact that a subject is depicted in a non-abstract painting (a table, for example) surely does not confer free-speech standing either to the table or the table's maker.

⁴ The First Amendment to the United State Constitution provides in relevant part that "Congress shall make no law ... abridging the freedom of speech." U.S. Const. amend. 1. The prohibition applies to state governments through the Fourteenth Amendment. Gitlow v. New York, 268 U.S. 652, 666, 45 S. Ct. 625, 69 L. Ed. 1138 (1925).

Arlene's tries to characterize its wedding flower arrangements as intrinsically art, not simply flowers depicted in art. Jumping off from a dictionary definition of "art," it declares that its wedding arrangements provide a celebratory atmosphere, and beautify, add a mood or lend a certain elegance to the ceremony. Appellants' Br. at 25. Arlene's gets it backwards. The wedding ceremony itself has been recognized as protected expression. Kaahumanu v. Hawaii, 682 F.3d 789, 798-99 (9th Cir. 2012). Flower arrangements may decorate a wedding couple's celebration, but it is neither the flowers nor the florist being celebrated.

A dictionary definition and a perhaps overwrought description of the flower arrangements Arlene's sells are a weak substitute for legal authority and avoid the central legal issue: Does a flower arrangement convey a message that is sufficiently communicative to qualify as expressive conduct? As shown below, the answer is no.

3. Case Law Does Not Support The Argument That Flower Arrangements Implicate Free-Speech Protection.

Arlene's cites seven cases in support of its contention that "protected expression occurs in many forms." Appellants' Br. at 26 n.19. Actually, there are not "many forms" of non-verbal, non-written expression that qualify as speech. Painting or drawing in various media, sculpture, music and nude performance are recognized as forms of protected expression. Flower arrangements are not. "Art" is not an open-ended concept in First Amendment law.

Arlene's cites Hurley v. Irish-Am. Gay Lesbian and Bisexual Grp. of Boston, 515 U.S. 557, 569, 115 S. Ct. 2338, 132 L. Ed. 2d 487 (1995), although it is not clear why. Hurley involved the question whether a parade organizer was entitled to free-speech protection, even though its parade lacked the "particularized message" specified by Spence. In concluding that parades are inherently expressive even if lacking a particular theme, the Court added:

[A] narrow, succinctly articulable message is not a condition of constitutional protection, which if confined to expressions conveying a "particularized message" [citing Spence] would never reach the unquestionably shielded painting of Jackson Pollack, music of Arnold Schoenberg, or Jabberwocky verse of Lewis Carroll.

Id. at 569.

The Hurley Court's observation that First Amendment protection extends to traditional forms of art including abstract painting, music and nonsense poetry was not unprecedented. In Miller v. California, 413 U.S. 15, 34, 93 S. Ct. 2607, 37 L. Ed. 2d 419 (1973), for example, the Court held that constitutional protection extends to "works which, taken as a whole, have serious literary, artistic, political, or scientific value ..." Miller involved a conviction for mailing obscene materials. Kaplan v. California, 413 U.S. 115, 119-20, 93 S. Ct. 2680, 37 L. Ed. 2d 492 (1973), involved a conviction for selling an obscene book, and the Court stated "both oral utterance and the printed word" have the same free-speech protection as "pictures, films, paintings, drawings, and engravings ..." Id. at 956.

Joseph Burstyn, Inc. v. Wilson, 343 U.S. 495, 501, 72 S. Ct. 777, 96 L. Ed. 1098 (1952), explains why art, such as film, is constitutionally protected speech while invalidating a law providing for censorship of movies:

It cannot be doubted that motion pictures are a significant medium for the communication of ideas. They may affect public attitudes and behavior in a variety of ways, ranging from direct espousal of a political or social doctrine to the subtle shaping of thought which characterizes all artistic expression.

Hurley did not break new ground in recognizing traditional forms of art as expressive and constitutionally protected, and the other painting/drawing decisions cited by Arlene's are similarly inapposite. White

v. City of Sparks, 500 F.3d 953 (9th Cir. 2007), involved an itinerant artist's ability to sell his nature paintings to passersby on city property. The court limited its analysis to original paintings with the explanation: "In painting, an artist conveys his sense of form, topic, and perspective. A painting may express a clear social position, as with Picasso's condemnation of the horrors of war in Guernica, or may express the artist's vision of movement and color ..." Id. at 956.

Piarowski v. Ill. Cmty. Coll. Dist. 515, 759 F.2d 625, 627 (7th Cir. 1985), involved stained-glass windows "in the style of Aubrey Beardsley," an illustrator. The question was whether a college could require the artist to move his display to a less conspicuous site because of complaints that some pieces were sexually explicit and racially offensive. Id. at 628. The court found no constitutional infringement with the college requiring relocation. Id. at 632-33.

Anderson v. City of Hermosa Beach, 621 F.3d 1051, 1061 (9th Cir. 2010), held that a tattoo is like a pen-and-ink drawing except it is engrafted on skin rather than paper. The court reasoned that a tattoo is similar to other recognized forms of First Amendment protected entertainment and visual expression (citing as examples music, dance, topless dancing, movies, parades and paintings). Id. at 1060.

As with painting and drawing, there was precedent for the Hurley Court's observation that music is expressive, communicative and constitutionally protected. Ward v. Rock Against Racism, 491 U.S. 781, 109 S. Ct. 2746, 105 L. Ed. 2d 661 (1989), cited by Arlene's, involved a rock-concert sponsor's challenge to a volume limit in New York's Central Park. In upholding the guideline as reasonable, the Court explained why music "as a form of expression and communication" is protected under the First Amendment, noting "Music is one of the oldest forms of human expression." Id. at 790.

Southeastern Promotions, Ltd. v. Conrad, 420 U.S. 546, 548, 95 S. Ct. 1239, 43 L. Ed. 2d 448 (1975), involved a municipal theater's rejection of an application to present the rock musical "Hair," based on reports the musical involved nudity and obscenity on stage. City of Erie v. Pap's A.M., 529 U.S. 277, 120 S. Ct. 1382, 146 L. Ed. 2d 265 (2000), followed Barnes v. Glen Theatre, Inc., 501 U.S. 560, 111 S. Ct. 2456, 115 L. Ed. 2d 504 (1991), in observing that nude dancing is expressive conduct.

Southeastern Promotions and Pap's A.M. are simply two of many decisions recognizing that nude or erotic performances are constitutionally protected activities. Even so, the activities are subject to reasonable regulation. For example, in Ino Ino, 132 Wn.2d at 125, 127-28, this Court recognized that "the communication of a nude dancer receives constitutional protection ...,” although the conduct is nonetheless subject to the state’s police power if a “time, place or manner restriction” is justified under the four-part test of O’Brien, 391 U.S. at 377.

The case law cited by Arlene’s recognizes free-speech protection for art and music, but flower arrangements are different. Under First Amendment law, flower arrangements are not sufficiently communicative to warrant constitutional protection.

B. WLAD Does Not Compel Arlene’s To Speak, Accommodate Or Endorse Any Message Regarding Same-Sex Marriage.

Arlene’s cherry-picks language from compelled-speech opinions to construct an argument that WLAD “forces Mrs. Stutzman to create expression against her will and conscience ...” Appellants’ Br. at 50. The decisions themselves, however, do not support the attempted construct.

Rumsfeld v. Forum for Academic and Institutional Rights, Inc., 547 U.S. 47, 126 S. Ct. 1297, 164 L. Ed. 2d (2006) (hereafter “FAIR”), provides a two-step framework for compelled-speech analysis.

The Court’s initial step was to determine whether the law at issue affected the speaker’s own message. Id. at 63. The Court concluded that a law school’s decision whether to allow military recruiters on campus is not inherently expressive, because there was little likelihood that the views of the recruiters would be identified as views of the law schools, and in any event the law schools would be free to disassociate themselves from those views. Id. at 64-65.

After finding that speech itself was not impermissibly regulated, the Court then considered whether the conduct involved was sufficiently expressive, under Johnson, supra at 1, to bring First Amendment protection into play. FAIR, 547 U.S. at 65-66. The Court concluded that an observer who saw military recruiters interviewing off-campus would have no way of knowing the reason without explanation from the law schools and that a regulated party cannot transform conduct into “speech” simply by talking about it. Id. at 66. The Court added, even if the law were regarded as regulating expressive conduct, it was a neutral regulation promoting a substantial governmental interest and would therefore satisfy the scrutiny of O’Brien, supra at 3.

Elane Photography, addressing the very same compelled-speech argument Arlene’s makes in this case, involved a commercial photographer’s refusal on religious grounds to take photos at a same-sex wedding. 309 P.3d at 59. The court rejected the compelled-speech argument, noting that New Mexico’s anti-discrimination law did not require the photographer to recite or display another’s message or even take photographs. The law only required that the photographer not discriminate. Id. at 64. Nor did the law require the photographer to “host or accommodate” another’s message. Id. at 66. The court addressed two cases cited by Arlene’s in this case, Miami Herald Publ’g Co. v. Tornillo, 418 U.S. 241, 94 S. Ct. 2831, 41 L. Ed. 2d 730 (1974) (state statute required newspapers to publish reply by candidate who was criticized), and Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Pub. Utils. Comm’n of California, 475 U.S. 1, 106 S. Ct. 903, 89 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1986) (commission allowed third-party group to send out messages with utility’s billing statements), because in those cases “the government commandeered a speaker’s means of reaching its audience and required the speaker to disseminate an opposing point of view.” Id. at 67.

Arlene’s argues that providing flowers for same-sex wedding couples will send a message that it approves of same-sex marriage. Leaving aside the question of how flower arrangements might look different based on the genders of the couple being married, this argument is the same as that rejected in FAIR and Elane Photography. Businesses that cater to weddings are paid and are not part of the ceremony itself. They are not recognized as sharing views with the wedding couple, they have the right to express whatever religious or political beliefs they wish, and they can post disclaimers on their website or in their advertising that they oppose same-sex marriage. Arlene’s does not convey any message through its flower arrangements and is certainly not conveying someone else’s.

C. The Standard Of Review Is Not Strict Scrutiny.

Arlene's asserts that the combined impingement on rights of free speech, free exercise and free association presents a "classic hybrid rights situation," so the standard of review is strict scrutiny. Appellants' Br. at 40-41. The Elane Photography court rejected the same argument as inadequately briefed. If anything, it appears the hybrid-rights argument was more extensively briefed there than here. See id., 309 P.3d at 75-76.

The notion of "hybrid rights" originated in Employment Div., Oregon Dep't of Human Res. v. Smith, 494 U.S. 872, 878-79, 110 S. Ct. 1595, 108 L. Ed. 2d 876 (1990), where the Court explained it had "never held that an individual's religious beliefs excuse him from compliance with an otherwise valid law prohibiting conduct that the State is free to regulate." The Court's analysis contains language from Justice Frankfurter in Minersville School Dist. Bd. Of Ed. v. Gobitis, 310 U.S. 586, 594-95, 60 S. Ct. 1010, 84 L. Ed. 1375 (1940), including: "The mere possession of religious convictions which contradict the relevant concerns of a political society does not relieve the citizen from the discharge of political responsibilities." Id., 494 U.S. at 879. The Court observed that the only occasions where regulation had been barred on the basis of the Free Exercise Clause occurred when a religious freedom claim was made in conjunction with other constitutional protections and that this case (involving the use of peyote in religious ceremonies) did not present “such a hybrid situation.” Id. at 881-82.

The Smith “hybrid-rights” standard of review has been described as “controversial,”⁵ “illogical,”⁶ and “untenable,”⁷ and this Court rejected Smith as precedent in First Covenant Church of Seattle v. City of Seattle, 120 Wn.2d 203, 216-19, 840 P.2d 174 (1993).⁸

Combs v. Homer-Ctr. Sch. Dist., 540 F.3d 231, 243-47 (3d Cir. 2008) (per curiam), collects Smith hybrid-rights decisions from the various federal circuits, showing that hybrid-rights law is not uniformly accepted as doctrine. Clearly, no circuit accepts the notion that bunching untenable constitutional claims together is sufficient to bring heightened scrutiny into play. Arlene’s cites San Jose Christian Coll. v. City of Morgan Hill, 360 F.3d 1024 (9th Cir. 2004), which rejected a hybrid-rights claim because the college had failed to demonstrate that application of a content-neutral

⁵ Grace United Methodist Church v. City of Cheyenne, 451 F.3d 643, 656 (10th Cir. 2006) (noting the Smith Court did not intend an expansive standard of review because it did not apply a hybrid-rights claim to the facts of the case before it).

⁶ Kissinger v. Bd. of Trs. of Ohio State Univ., 5 F.3d 177, 180 (6th Cir. 1993).

⁷ Church of the Lukumi Babalu Aye, Inc. v. City of Hialeah, 508 U.S. 520, 567, 113 S. Ct. 2217, 124 L. Ed. 2d 472 (1993) (Souter, J., concurring).

⁸ The Court described the church’s claim as “hybrid” to distinguish the case from the Smith holding, 120 Wn.2d at 216, but the Court did not apply a hybrid-rights analysis, instead employing a Gunwall analysis to find greater protection for religious institutions under the free-exercise clause of Article 1, section 11 of the Washington Constitution, id. at 226-27.

zoning law resulted in a viable impingement-of-speech claim. Id. at 1032. The court followed Miller v. Reed, 176 F.3d 1202, 1208 (9th Cir. 1999), which held that a plaintiff cannot make a hybrid-rights claim entitled to strict scrutiny analysis merely by combining a free exercise claim with an utterly meritless claim alleging violation of another fundamental right.

If this Court were to decide that flower arrangements constitute protected “speech,” the level of constitutional scrutiny for alleged government restriction on free speech should be analyzed under O’Brien, supra at 3. As summarized in Ino Ino:

Under O’Brien, the government’s regulation of the time, place, or manner of expressive conduct is sufficiently justified if (1) the regulation is within the constitutional power of government; (2) the regulation furthers an important or substantial governmental interest; (3) the governmental interest is unrelated to the suppression of free expression; and (4) the incidental restriction on alleged First Amendment freedoms is no greater than essential to the furtherance of that interest.^[9]

132 Wn.2d at 127-28.

There can be no question that WLAD is within the state’s police power and furthers an important governmental interest. RCW 49.60.010 declares: “[D]iscrimination threatens not only the rights and proper privileges of its inhabitants but menaces the institutions and foundation of a free democratic state.” This Court has explained that WLAD’s purpose of deterring and eradicating discrimination is a policy of the highest priority. Marquis v. City of Spokane, 130 Wn.2d 97, 109, 922 P.2d 43 (1996).

⁹ In a footnote, the Court discusses the difference, if any, in applying the O’Brien test rather than the traditional time, place and manner test. Id. at 128 n.7.

WLAD is not directed at suppression of expression. To the extent that WLAD arguably imposes an incidental restriction on Arlene’s free-speech rights, premised on the notion that flower arrangements are sufficiently communicative to constitute speech, WLAD easily passes constitutional scrutiny under O’Brien.

V. CONCLUSION

WSAJ respectfully submits that First Amendment free speech is not implicated in the making or selling of flower arrangements. The trial court’s decision should be affirmed.

DATED this 8th day of February, 2016.

Donovan Flora, WSBA No. 5624
Judith Lonnquist, WSBA No. 6421
Rebecca Roe, WSBA No. 7560
Ian Birk, WSBA No. 31431

On Behalf of the Washington State
Association for Justice

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I certify, under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of Washington, that I served, via electronic mail, a true and correct copy of

BRIEF OF AMICUS CURIAE, WASHINGTON STATE

ASSOCIATION FOR JUSTICE, upon the following:

Kristen K. Waggoner
kwaggoner@telladf.org

George Ahrend
gahrend@ahrendlaw.com

John R. Connelly
jconnelly@connelly-law.com

Alicia M. Berry
aberry@licbs.com

Michael R. Scott
mrs@hcmp.com

Amit D. Ranade
amit.ranade@hcmp.com

Jake Ewart
mje@hcmp.com

Margaret Chen
mchen@aclu-wa.org

Elizabeth Gill
egill@aclunc.org

Todd Bowers
todd@atg.wa.gov

Kimberlee Gunning
KimberleeG@atg.wa.gov

Noah Purcell
NoahP@atg.wa.gov

Rebecca Glasgow
RebeccaG@atg.wa.gov

Alan Copsey
AlanC@atg.wa.gov

Kristen Jensen
KristinJ@atg.wa.gov

DATED this 8th day February 2016, at Seattle, Washington.

Elaine S. Besmer
Legal Assistant

APPENDIX

2015 WL 4760453

NOTICE: THIS OPINION HAS NOT BEEN RELEASED FOR PUBLICATION IN THE PERMANENT LAW REPORTS. A PETITION FOR REHEARING IN THE COURT OF APPEALS OR A PETITION FOR CERTIORARI IN THE SUPREME COURT MAY BE PENDING.

Colorado Court of Appeals,
Div. I.

Charlie CRAIG and David
Mullins, Petitioners–Appellees,
v.

MASTERPIECE CAKESHOP, INC.,
and any successor entity, and Jack C.
Phillips, Respondents–Appellants, and

Colorado Civil Rights Commission, Appellee.

Court of Appeals No. 14CA1351

|
Announced August 13, 2015

Synopsis

Background: Cake shop and its owner sought review of the Civil Rights Commission's decision and issuance of cease and desist order, requiring shop and owner not to discriminate against potential customers because of their sexual orientation, in same-sex couple's action against shop and owner for discrimination based on sexual orientation under Anti-Discrimination Act, stemming from shop's refusal to sell couple wedding cake.

Holdings: The Court of Appeals, Taubman, J., held that:

[1] as a matter of first impression, adding owner as respondent to couple's formal complaint was permissible under relation back doctrine;

[2] owner's refusal to create cake for couple violated public accommodation provision of Act;

[3] cease and desist order did not compel shop to express celebratory message about same-sex marriage in violation of right to free speech;

[4] Act was neutral law of general applicability, and thus needed only to be rationally related to legitimate governmental interest to survive challenge under Free Exercise Clause;

[5] Free Exercise Clause of state constitution did not require neutral laws of general applicability to be reviewed under heightened, strict scrutiny;

[6] Act's proscription of sexual orientation discrimination by places of public accommodation was rationally related to state's interest in eliminating discrimination; and [7] cease and desist order did not exceed scope of Commission's authority.

Affirmed.

West Headnotes (28)

[1] Civil Rights

🔑 Charges and investigations

Adding owner of cake shop as respondent to same-sex couple's formal complaint with Civil Rights Commission for discrimination based on sexual orientation under Anti-Discrimination Act, stemming from shop's refusal to sell couple wedding cake, was permissible under relation back doctrine; both initial charge of discrimination filed with Commission and formal complaint alleged identical conduct, owner was aware from beginning of litigation that he was the person whose conduct was at issue, and owner should have known that, but for couple's oversight in not naming owner, owner would have been named in charge of discrimination. Colo. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 24-34-601(2); Colo. R. Civ. P. 15(c).

Cases that cite this headnote

[2] Civil Rights

🔑 Hearing, determination, and relief; costs and fees

Erroneous reference in Civil Rights Division's letter of probable cause determination to employment practices section of Anti-Discrimination Act, rather than public accommodation section under which same-sex couple filed discrimination complaint, did not violate requirement under Act that respondents be notified with specificity of legal authority and jurisdiction of Civil Rights Commission, in couple's action against cake shop and its owner for discrimination based on sexual orientation, stemming from shop's refusal to sell couple wedding cake, since it was not possible for shop and owner to have been misled about legal basis for Commission's findings; charge of discrimination and notice of determination correctly referenced public accommodation section of Act, and director's designee, who drafted notice of determination with incorrect citation, signed affidavit explaining that reference to employment practices section was a typographical error and that reference should have been to public accommodation section. Colo. Rev. Stat. Ann. §§ 24-34-306(2) (b)(II), 24-34-402, 24-34-601.

Cases that cite this headnote

[3] Civil Rights

🔑 Place of business or public resort

Cake shop owner's refusal to create wedding cake for same-sex couple was because of couple's sexual orientation in violation of public accommodation provision of Anti-Discrimination Act, despite contention that owner refused to create cake because of owner's opposition to same-sex marriage; act of same-sex marriage was closely correlated to couple's sexual orientation, but for couple's sexual orientation, couple would not have sought to enter into same-sex marriage, and but for their intent to do so, owner would not have denied couple its services. Colo. Rev. Stat. Ann. §§ 24-34-301(7), 24-34-601(1).

1 Cases that cite this headnote

[4] Constitutional Law

🔑 Relation between state and federal rights

State constitutional protection of freedom of speech provides greater protection than does First Amendment's free speech protection. U.S. Const. Amend. 1; Colo. Const. art. 2, § 10.

Cases that cite this headnote

[5] Constitutional Law

🔑 Right to refrain from speaking

Constitutional Law

🔑 Compelled or forced speech, support, or participation

Freedom of speech protected by First Amendment includes the right to refrain from speaking and prohibits government from telling people what they must say. U.S. Const. Amend. 1.

Cases that cite this headnote

[6] Constitutional Law

🔑 Freedom of Speech, Expression, and Press

Under First Amendment protection for freedom of speech, government cannot prescribe what shall be orthodox in politics, nationalism, religion, or other matters of opinion by forcing individuals to publicly disseminate its own ideological message. U.S. Const. Amend. 1.

Cases that cite this headnote

[7] Constitutional Law

🔑 Compelled or forced speech, support, or participation

Under First Amendment protection for freedom of speech, government cannot require dissemination of an ideological message by displaying it on individual's private property in a manner and for express purpose that it be observed and read by the public. U.S. Const. Amend. 1.

Cases that cite this headnote

[8] Constitutional Law

🔑 Compelled or forced speech, support, or participation

Government may not require an individual to host or accommodate another speaker's message under First Amendment protection for freedom of speech. U.S. Const. Amend. 1.

Cases that cite this headnote

[9] Constitutional Law

🔑 Symbolic speech

Some forms of conduct are symbolic speech and deserve First Amendment freedom of speech protections. U.S. Const. Amend. 1.

Cases that cite this headnote

[10] Constitutional Law

🔑 Conduct, protection of

First Amendment freedom of speech protections extend only to conduct that is inherently expressive. U.S. Const. Amend. 1.

Cases that cite this headnote

[11] Constitutional Law

🔑 Conduct, protection of

In deciding whether conduct is inherently expressive, as required for conduct to fall under First Amendment freedom of speech protections, courts ask whether intent to convey a particularized message was present, and whether the likelihood was great that the message would be understood by those who viewed it. U.S. Const. Amend. 1.

Cases that cite this headnote

[12] Constitutional Law

🔑 Conduct, protection of

Message intended to be conveyed by conduct need not be narrow, or succinctly articulable in order for conduct to be inherently expressive, as required for conduct to fall under First Amendment freedom of speech protection. U.S. Const. Amend. 1.

Cases that cite this headnote

[13] Constitutional Law

🔑 Compelled or forced speech, support, or participation

In cases involving claims of compelled expression in violation of First Amendment freedom of speech, threshold question is whether compelled conduct is sufficiently expressive to trigger First Amendment protections. U.S. Const. Amend. 1.

Cases that cite this headnote

[14] Constitutional Law

🔑 Freedom of speech, expression, and press

Party asserting that conduct is expressive bears burden of demonstrating that First Amendment freedom of speech applies, and party must advance more than a mere plausible contention that its conduct is expressive. U.S. Const. Amend. 1.

Cases that cite this headnote

[15] Constitutional Law

🔑 Conduct, protection of Government can regulate communicative conduct without violating First Amendment protection for freedom of speech if it has important interest unrelated to suppression of the message and if impact on the communication is no more than necessary to achieve government's purpose. U.S. Const. Amend. 1.

Cases that cite this headnote

[16] Civil Rights

🔑 Place of business or public resort

Constitutional Law

🔑 Trade or Business

Civil Rights Commission's cease and desist order, requiring cake shop not to discriminate against potential customers because of their sexual orientation, issued in same-sex couple's action against shop for discrimination based on sexual orientation under Anti-Discrimination Act, stemming from shop's refusal to sell couple wedding cake, did not compel shop to express celebratory message about same-sex marriage in violation of First Amendment and state constitutional freedom of speech protections; compelled conduct under order was government's mandate that shop comport with Act, and act of designing and selling wedding cakes to all customers free of discrimination did not convey celebratory message about same-sex weddings likely to be understood by those who viewed it. U.S. Const. Amend. 1; Colo. Const. art. 2, § 10; Colo. Rev. Stat. Ann. §§ 24-34-301(7), 24-34-601(2).

1 Cases that cite this headnote

[17] Constitutional Law

👉 Conduct, protection of

When determining whether conduct is inherently expressive, as required for conduct to fall under First Amendment freedom of speech protections, courts must consider allegedly expressive conduct within the context in which it occurred. U.S. Const. Amend. 1.

Cases that cite this headnote

[18] Constitutional Law

👉 Free Exercise of Religion

Free exercise of religion under First Amendment and state constitution means, first and foremost, the right to believe and profess whatever religious doctrine one desires. U.S. Const. Amend. 1; Colo. Const. art. 2, § 4.

Cases that cite this headnote

[19] Constitutional Law

👉 Free Exercise of Religion

Free exercise of religion protected under First Amendment and state constitution also involves the performance of, or abstention from, physical acts. U.S. Const. Amend. 1; Colo. Const. art. 2, § 4.

Cases that cite this headnote

[20] Constitutional Law

👉 Strict scrutiny; compelling interest

If a law burdens religious practice and is not neutral or not generally applicable, it must be justified by a compelling government interest and must be narrowly tailored to advance that interest under First Amendment and state constitutional protections for free exercise of religion. U.S. Const. Amend. 1; Colo. Const. art. 2, § 4.

Cases that cite this headnote

[21] Constitutional Law

👉 Strict scrutiny; compelling interest

Law is not neutral, and thus is invalid under Free Exercise Clause of First Amendment unless justified by compelling interest and narrowly tailored to advance that interest, if the object of a law is to infringe upon or restrict practices because of their religious motivation. U.S. Const. Amend. 1.

Cases that cite this headnote

[22] Constitutional Law

👉 Strict scrutiny; compelling interest

Law is not generally applicable, and thus is invalid under Free Exercise Clause of First Amendment unless justified by compelling interest and narrowly tailored to advance that interest, when it imposes burdens on religiously motivated conduct while permitting exceptions for secular conduct or for favored religions. U.S. Const. Amend. 1.

Cases that cite this headnote

[23] Constitutional Law

👉 Particular Issues and Applications

Anti-Discrimination Act is neutral law of general applicability, and thus Act need only be rationally related to legitimate governmental interest in order to survive constitutional challenge under First Amendment Free Exercise Clause; Act is not designed to impede religious conduct and does not impose burdens on religious conduct not imposed on secular conduct. U.S. Const. Amend. 1; Colo. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 24-34-601(2).

Cases that cite this headnote

[24] Constitutional Law

🔑 Neutrality; general applicability

Law need not apply to every individual and entity to be generally applicable, as required for law to be rationally related to legitimate governmental interest in order to survive constitutional challenge under First Amendment Free Exercise clause; rather, law is generally applicable so long as it does not regulate only religiously motivated conduct. U.S. Const. Amend. 1.

Cases that cite this headnote

[25] Constitutional Law

🔑 Neutrality; general applicability

Constitutional Law

🔑 Strict scrutiny; compelling interest

Free Exercise Clause of state constitution did not require neutral laws of general applicability to be reviewed under heightened, strict scrutiny, but rather rational basis exception to strict scrutiny review applicable to free exercise claims under First Amendment applied to free exercise claims under state constitution, such that neutral laws of general applicability needed only to be related to legitimate governmental interest to survive constitutional challenge under state Free Exercise Clause; Free Exercise Clause of state constitution embodied same values of free exercise and government noninvolvement secured by religious clauses of First Amendment, and Free Exercise Clause of state constitution was consistently interpreted using First Amendment case law. U.S. Const. Amend. 1; Colo. Const. art. 2, § 4.

Cases that cite this headnote

[26] Constitutional Law

🔑 Particular Issues and Applications

Anti-Discrimination Act's proscription of sexual orientation discrimination by places of public accommodation was rationally related to state's interest in eliminating discrimination in such places, and thus Act was a reasonable regulation that did not offend Free Exercise Clauses of First Amendment or state constitution; without Act, businesses would have been able to discriminate against potential patrons based on their sexual orientation, such discrimination in places of public accommodation had measurable adverse economic effects, and Act created hospitable environment for all consumers by preventing discrimination on basis of certain characteristics, including sexual orientation. U.S. Const. Amend. 1; Colo. Const. art. 2, § 4; Colo. Rev. Stat. Ann. §§ 24-34-301(7), 24-34-601(2).

1 Cases that cite this headnote

[27] Pretrial Procedure

🔑 Grounds of claim or defense; 'fishing expedition'

Trial court did not abuse its discretion by denying cake shop discovery as to type of wedding cake same-sex couple intended to order from shop and details of their wedding ceremony on review of Civil Rights Commission's decision in favor of couple in action against shop for discrimination based on sexual orientation under Anti-Discrimination Act, stemming from shop's refusal to sell couple wedding cake; type of cake and details of ceremony were not relevant to resolving essential issues at trial. Colo. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 24-34-601(2).

Cases that cite this headnote

[28] Civil Rights

🔑 Hearing, determination, and relief; costs and fees

Civil Rights Commission's cease and desist order, requiring cake shop not to discriminate against potential customers because of their sexual orientation, did not exceed scope of Commission's statutory authority in same-sex couple's action against shop for discrimination based on sexual orientation under Anti-Discrimination Act, stemming from shop's refusal to sell couple wedding cake; order was aimed at specific discriminatory or unfair practice involved in couple's complaint. Colo.

Rev. Stat. Ann. §§ 24-34-601(2), 24-34-305(c)
(I), 24-34-306(9).

1 Cases that cite this headnote

West Codenotes

Recognized as Unconstitutional

Colo. Const. art. 2, § 31; 42 U.S.C.A. § 2000bb-1(b); Colo.
Rev. Stat. Ann. § 14-2-104(1)(b)

Colorado Civil Rights Commission CR 2013-0008

Attorneys and Law Firms

King & Greisen, LLP, Paula Greisen, Denver, Colorado;
Mark Silverstein, Sara R. Neel, Denver, Colorado; Ria
Tabacco Mar, New York, New York, for Petitioners– Appellees

Jeremy D. Tedesco, Scottsdale, Arizona; Michael J. Norton,
Natalie L. Decker, Greenwood Village, Colorado; Nicolle H.
Martin, Lakewood, Colorado, for Respondents–Appellants

Cynthia H. Coffman, Attorney General, Stacy L.
Worthington, Senior Assistant Attorney General, Denver,
Colorado, for Appellee

Arnold & Porter LLP, Thomas W. Stoeber, Jr., Holly A.
Sterrett, Denver, Colorado, for Amicus Curiae National Center for Lesbian Rights

Ayesha N. Khan, Washington, D.C.; for Amicus Curiae Americans United for Separation of Church and State and Freedom From Religion Foundation

Wheeler Trigg O'Donnell, LLP, Craig R. May, Denver,
Colorado, for Amicus Curiae Main Street Alliance,
Hopscotch Bakery, and Gary's Auto Service; Mayer Brown
LLP, Alex O. Kardon, Hannah Y.S. Chanoine, Rory K.
Schneider, New York, New York; Mayer Brown, LLP, Richard B. Katskee, Washington, D.C.

Hogan Lovells U.S. LLP, Andrew C. Lillie, Jessica Black Livingston, Denver, Colorado, for Amici Curiae National Council of Jewish Women; Nehirim; People for the American Way Foundation; Reconciling Works; Lutherans
For Full Participation; Reconstructionist Rabbinical College and Jewish Reconstructionist Communities; Religious Institute, Inc.; Sikh American Legal Defense and Education

Fund; Anti-Defamation League; Bend the Arc: A Jewish Partnership for Justice; Central Conference of American
Rabbis; Global Justice Institute; Hadassah, Women's Zionist
Organization of America; Japanese American Citizens
League; Keshet; Metropolitan Community Churches; More Light Presbyterians; T'ruah: The Rabbinic Call for Human Rights; Union for Reform Judaism; Women of Reform
Judaism; and Women's League for Conservative Judaism

Brownstein, Hyatt, Farber & Schreck, LLP, John V.
McDermott, Richard B. Benenson, Lauren E. Schmidt, Denver, Colorado, for Amicus Curiae NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc.

Reilly Pozner LLP, John M. McHugh, Anthony L. Giacomini, Denver, Colorado, for Amicus Curiae Lambda Legal Defense and Education Fund, Inc., One Colorado and One Colorado Educational Fund

Opinion

Opinion by JUDGE TAUBMAN

*1 ¶ 1 This case juxtaposes the rights of complainants, Charlie Craig and David Mullins, under Colorado's public accommodations law to obtain a wedding cake to celebrate their same-sex marriage against the rights of respondents, Masterpiece Cakeshop, Inc., and its owner, Jack C. Phillips, who contend that requiring them to provide such a wedding cake violates their constitutional rights to freedom of speech and the free exercise of religion.

¶ 2 This appeal arises from an administrative decision by appellee, the Colorado Civil Rights Commission (Commission), which upheld the decision of an administrative law judge (ALJ), who ruled in favor of Craig and Mullins and against Masterpiece and Phillips on cross-motions for summary judgment. For the reasons discussed below, we affirm the Commission's decision.

I. Background

¶ 3 In July 2012, Craig and Mullins visited Masterpiece, a bakery in Lakewood, Colorado, and requested that Phillips design and create a cake to celebrate their same-sex wedding.
Phillips declined, telling them that he does not create wedding cakes for same-sex weddings because of his religious beliefs, but advising Craig and Mullins that he would be happy to make and sell them any other baked goods. Craig and Mullins promptly left Masterpiece without discussing with Phillips any details of their wedding cake. The following day, Craig's mother, Deborah Munn, called Phillips, who advised her that Masterpiece did not make wedding cakes for same-sex weddings because of his religious beliefs and because Colorado did not recognize same-sex marriages.

¶ 4 The ALJ found that Phillips has been a Christian for approximately thirty-five years and believes in Jesus Christ as his Lord and savior. Phillips believes that decorating cakes is a form of art, that he can honor God through his artistic talents, and that he would displease God by creating cakes for same-sex marriages.

¶ 5 Craig and Mullins had planned to marry in Massachusetts, where same-sex marriages were legal, and later celebrate with friends in Colorado, which at that time did not recognize same-sex marriages.¹ See Colo. Const. art. 2, § 31; § 14-2-104(1)(b), C.R.S. 2014.

¹ On June 26, 2015, the United States Supreme Court announced Obergefell v. Hodges, 576 U.S. —, —, 135 S.Ct. 2584, 2604, —L.Ed.2d — (2015), reaffirming that the “right to marry is a fundamental right inherent in the liberty of the person” and holding that the Due Process and Equal Protection Clauses of the Fourteenth Amendment guarantee same-sex couples a fundamental right to marry. Colorado has recognized same-sex marriages since October 7, 2014, when, based on other litigation, then Colorado Attorney General John Suthers instructed all sixty-four county clerks in Colorado to begin issuing same-sex marriage licenses. See Jordan Steffen & Jesse Paul, Colorado Supreme Court, Suthers Clear Way for Same-Sex Licenses, Denver Post, Oct. 7, 2014, available at <http://perma.cc/7N7G-4LD3>.

¶ 6 Craig and Mullins later filed charges of discrimination with the Colorado Civil Rights Division (Division), alleging discrimination based on sexual orientation under the Colorado Anti-Discrimination Act (CADA), §§ 24-34-301 to -804, C.R.S.2014. After an investigation, the Division issued a notice of determination finding probable cause to credit the allegations of discrimination. Craig and Mullins then filed a formal complaint with the Office of Administrative Courts alleging that Masterpiece had discriminated against them in a place of public accommodation because of their sexual orientation in violation of section 24-34-601(2), C.R.S.2014.

*2 ¶ 7 The parties did not dispute any material facts. Masterpiece and Phillips admitted that the bakery is a place of public accommodation and that they refused to sell Craig and Mullins a cake because of their intent to engage in a same-sex marriage ceremony. After the parties filed cross-motions for summary judgment, the ALJ issued a lengthy written order finding in favor of Craig and Mullins.

¶ 8 The ALJ's order was affirmed by the Commission. The Commission's final cease and desist order required that Masterpiece (1) take remedial measures, including comprehensive staff training and alteration to the company's policies to ensure compliance with CADA; and (2) file quarterly compliance reports for two years with the Division describing the remedial measures taken to comply with CADA and documenting all patrons who are denied service and the reasons for the denial.

¶ 9 Masterpiece and Phillips now appeal the Commission's order.

II. Motion to Dismiss

¶ 10 At the outset, Phillips and Masterpiece contend that the ALJ and the Commission erred in denying two motions to dismiss which they filed pursuant to C.R.C.P. 12(b)(1), (2), and (5). We disagree.

A. Standard of Review

¶ 11 We review the ALJ's ruling on a C.R.C.P. 12(b) motion to dismiss de novo. § 24-4-106(7), C.R.S. 2014; Bly v. Story, 241 P.3d 529, 533 (Colo.2010); Tidwell ex rel. Tidwell v. City & Cnty. of Denver, 83 P.3d 75, 81 (Colo.2003).²

² Section 24-4-106(7), C.R.S.2014, outlines the scope of judicial review of agency action and provides:

If the court finds no error, it shall affirm the agency action. If it finds that the agency action is arbitrary or capricious, a denial of statutory right, contrary to constitutional right, power, privilege, or immunity, in excess of statutory jurisdiction, authority, purposes, or limitations, not in accord with the procedures or procedural limitations of this article or as otherwise required by law, an abuse or clearly unwarranted exercise of discretion, based upon findings of fact that are clearly erroneous on the whole record, unsupported by substantial evidence when the record is considered as a whole, or otherwise contrary to law, then the court shall hold unlawful and set aside the agency action and shall restrain the enforcement of the order or rule under review, compel any agency action to be taken which has been unlawfully withheld or unduly delayed, remand the case for further proceedings, and afford such other relief as may be appropriate. In making the foregoing determinations, the court shall review the whole record or such portions thereof as may be cited by any party. In all cases under review, the court shall determine all questions of law and interpret the statutory and constitutional provisions involved and shall apply such interpretation to the facts duly found or established.

B. First Motion to Dismiss— Lack of Jurisdiction Over Phillips

[1] ¶ 12 Phillips filed a motion to dismiss pursuant to C.R.C.P. 12(b) alleging that the Commission lacked jurisdiction to adjudicate the charges against him.³ Specifically, he claimed that it lacked jurisdiction because Mullins named only “Masterpiece Cakeshop,” and not Phillips personally, as the respondent in the initial charge of discrimination filed with the Commission.

³ In his procedural order, the ALJ notified the parties of his deadline for “filing all motions pursuant to Rule 12, Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure,” and the parties proceeded as if the rules of civil procedure applied. Section 24–34–306(5), C.R.S.2014, provides that “discovery procedures may be used by the commission and the parties under the same circumstances and in the same manner as is provided by the Colorado rules of civil procedure.”

*3 ¶ 13 The ALJ, applying the relation back doctrine of C.R.C.P. 15(c), denied the motion. He concluded that adding Phillips as a respondent to the formal complaint was permissible for several reasons. First, he noted that both the charge of discrimination and the formal complaint alleged identical conduct. He further noted that Phillips was aware from the beginning of the litigation that he was the person whose conduct was at issue. Finally, the ALJ found that Phillips should have known that, but for Mullins' oversight in not naming Phillips, he would have been named as a respondent in the charge of discrimination. We agree with the ALJ.

¶ 14 Although no Colorado appellate court has previously addressed this issue, we conclude that the omission of a party's name from a CADA charging document should be considered under the relation back doctrine.

¶ 15C.R.C.P. 15(c), which is nearly identical to Fed.R.Civ.P. 15(c)(1)(C), contains three requirements which, if met, allow for a claim in an amended complaint against a new party to relate back to the filing of the original: (1) the claim must have arisen out of the same transaction or conduct set forth in the original complaint; (2) the new party must have received notice of the action within the period provided by law for commencing the action; and (3) the new party must have known or reasonably should have known that, “but for a mistake concerning the identity of the proper party, the action would have been brought against him.” See S. Ute Indian Tribe v. King Consol. Ditch Co., 250 P.3d 1226, 1237 (Colo.2011); Lavarato v. Branney, 210 P.3d 485, 489 (Colo.App.2009). “Many courts have liberally construed [Fed.R.Civ.P. 15(c)(1)(C)] to find that amendments simply adding or dropping parties, as well as amendments that actually substitute defendants, fall within the ambit of the rule.” 6 Charles A. Wright & Arthur R. Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure § 1498.2 (3d ed.1998); see also Goodman v. Praxair, Inc., 494 F.3d 458, 468 (4th Cir.2007).

¶ 16 Courts interpreting Fed.R.Civ.P. 15(c)(1)(C) have concluded that the pertinent question when amending any claim to add a new party is whether the party to be added, when viewed from the standpoint of a reasonably prudent person, should have expected that the original complaint might be altered to add the new party. See Schiavone v. Fortune, 477 U.S. 21, 31, 106 S.Ct. 2379, 91 L.Ed.2d 18 (1986) (“The linchpin is notice, and notice within the limitations period.”); 6 Wright & Miller at § 1498.3 (“Relation back will be refused only if the court finds that there is no reason why the party to be added should have understood that it was not named due to mistake.”).

¶ 17 Here, the ALJ properly found that the three requirements for application of the relation back doctrine were satisfied. First, the claim against Phillips arose out of the same transaction as the original complaint against Masterpiece. Second, Phillips received timely notice of the original charge filed against Masterpiece. Indeed, he responded to it on behalf of Masterpiece. Third, Phillips knew or reasonably should have known that the original complaint should have named him as a respondent. The charging document frequently referred to Phillips by name and identified him as the owner of Masterpiece Cakeshop and the person who told Craig and Mullins that his standard business practice was to refuse to make wedding cakes for same-sex weddings. Consequently, Phillips suffered no prejudice from not being named in the original complaint.

¶ 18 Based on these findings, we conclude that the ALJ did not err in applying C.R.C.P. 15(c)'s "relation back" rule. Accordingly, we conclude that the ALJ did not err when he denied Phillips' motion to dismiss.

C. Second Motion to Dismiss— Public Accommodation Charges

*4 ¶ 19 Phillips and Masterpiece jointly filed the second motion to dismiss. They alleged that the Commission lacked jurisdiction and failed to state a claim in its notice of determination as required by section 24–34–306(2)(b)(II), C.R.S.2014. We disagree.

¶ 20 Section 24–34–306(2)(b)(II) provides: "If the director or the director's designee determines that probable cause exists, the director or the director's designee shall serve the respondent with written notice stating with specificity the legal authority and jurisdiction of the commission and the matters of fact and law asserted."

[2] ¶ 21 The Division's letter of probable cause determination erroneously referenced section 24–34–402, C.R.S.2014, the employment practices section of CADA, and not section 24–34601(2), the public accommodations section under which Craig and Mullins filed their complaint. According to Phillips and Masterpiece, this erroneous citation violated section 24–34–306(2)(b)(II)'s requirement that respondents be notified "with specificity" of the "legal authority and jurisdiction of the commission."

¶ 22 The ALJ denied the second motion to dismiss. He concluded that Masterpiece and Phillips could not have been misled by the error, because "[t]here is no dispute that this case does not involve either an allegation or evidence of discriminatory employment practices." Again, we agree with the ALJ.

¶ 23 The charge of discrimination and the notice of determination correctly referenced section 24–34–601, the public accommodations section of CADA, several times.

Further, the director's designee who drafted the notice of determination with the incorrect citation signed an affidavit explaining that the reference to section 24–34402 was a typographical error, and that the reference should have been to section 24–34–601. Because Masterpiece and Phillips could not have been misled about the legal basis for the Commission's findings, we perceive no error in the Commission's refusal to dismiss the charges against Masterpiece and Phillips because of a typographical error. See Andersen v. Lindenbaum, 160 P.3d 237, 238 (Colo.2007) (typographical error in letter constitutes reasonable explanation for incorrect date later attested to in deposition).

¶ 24 Accordingly, we conclude that the ALJ did not err when he denied Phillips' and Masterpiece's second motion to dismiss.⁴

4 Having affirmed the denials of the motions to dismiss, we now refer to Masterpiece and Phillips collectively as "Masterpiece" in this opinion.

III. CADA Violation

¶ 25 Masterpiece contends that the ALJ erred in concluding that its refusal to create a wedding cake for Craig and Mullins was "because of" their sexual orientation. Specifically, Masterpiece asserts that its refusal to create the cake was "because of" its opposition to same-sex marriage, not because of its opposition to their sexual orientation. We conclude that the act of same-sex marriage is closely correlated to Craig's and Mullins' sexual orientation, and therefore, the ALJ did not err when he found that Masterpiece's refusal to create a wedding cake for Craig and Mullins was "because of" their sexual orientation, in violation of CADA.

A. Standard of Review

¶ 26 Whether Masterpiece violated CADA is a question of law reviewed de novo. § 24–4–106(7).

B. Applicable Law

*5 ¶ 27 Section 24–34–601(2)(a), C.R.S.2014, reads, as relevant here:

It is a discriminatory practice and unlawful for a person, directly or indirectly, to refuse, withhold from, or deny to an individual or a group, because of ... sexual orientation ... the full and equal enjoyment of the goods, services, facilities, privileges, advantages, or accommodations of a place of public accommodation....⁵

⁵ CADA also bars discrimination in places of public accommodation on the basis of disability, race, creed, color, sex, marital status, national origin, and ancestry. § 24-34-601(2)(a), C.R.S.2014.

¶ 28 In Tesmer v. Colorado High School Activities Association, 140 P.3d 249, 254 (Colo.App.2006), a division of this court concluded that to prevail on a discrimination claim under CADA, plaintiffs must prove that, “but for” their membership in an enumerated class, they would not have been denied the full privileges of a place of public accommodation. The division explained that plaintiffs need not establish that their membership in the enumerated class was the “sole” cause of the denial of services. Id. Rather, it is sufficient that they show that the discriminatory action was based in whole or in part on their membership in the protected class. Id.

¶ 29 Further, a “place of public accommodation” is “any place of business engaged in any sales to the public and any place offering services, facilities, privileges, advantages, or accommodations to the public, including but not limited to any business offering wholesale or retail sales to the public.” § 24-34-601(1). Finally, CADA defines “sexual orientation” as “an individual's orientation toward heterosexuality, homosexuality, bisexuality, or transgender status or another individual's perception thereof.” § 24-34-301(7), C.R.S.2014.

C. Analysis

[3] ¶ 30 Masterpiece asserts that it did not decline to make Craig's and Mullins' wedding cake “because of” their sexual orientation. It argues that it does not object to or refuse to serve patrons because of their sexual orientation, and that it assured Craig and Mullins that it would design and create any other bakery product for them, just not a wedding cake. Masterpiece asserts that its decision was solely “because of” Craig's and Mullins' intended conduct—entering into marriage with a same-sex partner—and the celebratory message about same-sex marriage that baking a wedding cake would convey. Therefore, because its refusal to serve Craig and Mullins was not “because of” their sexual orientation, Masterpiece contends that it did not violate CADA. We disagree.

¶ 31 Masterpiece argues that the ALJ made two incorrect presumptions. First, it contends that the ALJ incorrectly presumed that opposing same-sex marriage is tantamount to opposing the rights of gays, lesbians, and bisexuals to the equal enjoyment of public accommodations. Second, it contends that the ALJ incorrectly presumed that only gay, lesbian, and bisexual couples engage in same-sex marriage.

¶ 32 Masterpiece thus distinguishes between discrimination based on a person's status and discrimination based on conduct closely correlated with that status. However, the United States Supreme Court has recognized that such distinctions are generally inappropriate. See Christian Legal Soc'y Chapter of Univ. of Cal., Hastings Coll. of Law v. Martinez, 561 U.S. 661, 689, 130 S.Ct. 2971, 177 L.Ed.2d 838 (2010) (“[The Christian Legal Society] contends that it does not exclude individuals because of sexual orientation, but rather ‘on the basis of a conjunction of conduct and the belief that the conduct is not wrong.’ ...Our decisions have declined to distinguish between status and conduct in this context.”); Lawrence v. Texas, 539 U.S. 558, 575, 123 S.Ct. 2472, 156 L.Ed.2d 508 (2003) (“When homosexual conduct is made criminal by the law of the State, that declaration in and of itself is an invitation to subject homosexual persons to discrimination.”); id. at 583, 123 S.Ct. 2472 (O'Connor, J., concurring in the judgment) (“While it is true that the law applies only to conduct, the conduct targeted by this law is conduct that is closely correlated with being homosexual. Under such circumstances, [the] law is ... directed toward gay persons as a class.”); see also Bob Jones Univ. v. United States, 461 U.S. 574, 605, 103 S.Ct. 2017, 76 L.Ed.2d 157 (1983) (concluding that prohibiting admission to students married to someone of a different race was a form of racial discrimination, although the ban restricted conduct).

*6 ¶ 33 Further, in Obergefell v. Hodges, 576 U.S. —, 135 S.Ct. 2584, — L.Ed.2d — (2015), the Supreme Court equated laws precluding same-sex marriage to discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation. Id. at —, 135 S.Ct. at 2604 (observing that the “denial to same-sex couples of the right to marry” is a “disability on gays and lesbians” which “serves to disrespect and subordinate them”). The Court stated: “The nature of marriage is that, through its enduring bond, two persons together can find other freedoms, such as expression, intimacy, and spirituality. This is true for all persons, whatever their sexual orientation.” Id. at —, 135 S.Ct. at 2599 (emphasis added). “Were the Court to stay its hand ... it still would deny gays and lesbians many rights and responsibilities intertwined with marriage.” Id. at —, 135 S.Ct. at 2606.

¶ 34 In these decisions, the Supreme Court recognized that, in some cases, conduct cannot be divorced from status. This is so when the conduct is so closely correlated with the status that it is engaged in exclusively or predominantly by persons who have that particular status. We conclude that the act of same-sex marriage constitutes such conduct because it is “engaged in exclusively or predominantly” by gays, lesbians, and bisexuals. Masterpiece’s distinction, therefore, is one without a difference. But for their sexual orientation, Craig and Mullins would not have sought to enter into a same-sex marriage, and but for their intent to do so, Masterpiece would not have denied them its services.

¶ 35 In Elane Photography, LLC v. Willock, the New Mexico Supreme Court rejected a similar argument raised by a wedding photographer. 309 P.3d 53, 60–64 (N.M.2013). The court concluded that by prohibiting discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation, New Mexico’s antidiscrimination law similarly protects “conduct that is inextricably tied to sexual orientation,” including the act of same-sex marriage. Id. at 62. The court observed that “[o]therwise, we would interpret [the New Mexico public accommodations law] as protecting same-gender couples against discriminatory treatment, but only to the extent that they do not openly display their same-gender sexual orientation.” Id. We agree with the reasoning of the New Mexico Supreme Court.⁶

⁶ An Oregon ALJ reached a similar conclusion when addressing an Oregon bakery’s argument that its refusal to create a wedding cake for a same-sex couple was not on account of the couple’s sexual orientation, but rather the bakery’s objection to participation in the event for which the cake would be prepared—a same-sex wedding ceremony. In the Matter of Klein, Nos. 44–14 & 45–15, 2015 WL 4503460, at *52 (Or. Comm’r of Labor & Indus. July 2, 2015) (“In conclusion, the forum holds that when a law prohibits discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation, that law similarly protects conduct that is inextricably tied to sexual orientation.”).

¶ 36 Masterpiece relies on Bray v. Alexandria Women’s Health Clinic, 506 U.S. 263, 113 S.Ct. 753, 122 L.Ed.2d 34 (1993), which declined to equate opposition to voluntary abortion with discrimination against women. Id. at 269–70, 113 S.Ct. 753. As in Bray, it asks us to decline to equate opposition to same-sex marriage with discrimination against gays, lesbians, and bisexuals. Masterpiece’s reliance on Bray is misplaced.

¶ 37 Bray considered whether the defendants, several organizations that coordinated antiabortion demonstrations, could be subject to tort liability under 42 U.S.C. § 1985(3) (1988).⁷ Established precedent required that plaintiffs in section 1985(3) actions prove that “some ... class-based, invidiously discriminatory animus [lay] behind the [defendant’s] actions.” Griffin v. Breckenridge, 403 U.S. 88, 102, 91 S.Ct. 1790, 29 L.Ed.2d 338 (1971). However, CADA requires no such showing of “animus.” See Tesmer, 140 P.3d at 253 (plaintiffs need only prove that “but for” their membership in an enumerated class they would not have been denied the full privileges of a place of public accommodation).

⁷ That law creates a private cause of action for parties seeking remedies against public and private parties who conspired to interfere with their civil rights.

*7 ¶ 38 Further, Masterpiece admits that it refused to serve Craig and Mullins “because of” its opposition to persons entering into same-sex marriages, conduct which we conclude is closely correlated with sexual orientation. Therefore, even if we assume that CADA requires plaintiffs to establish an intent to discriminate, as in section 1985(3) action, the ALJ reasonably could have inferred from Masterpiece’s conduct an intent to discriminate against Craig and Mullins “because of” their sexual orientation.

¶ 39 We also note that although the Bray Court held that opposition to voluntary abortion did not equate to discrimination against women, it observed that “[s]ome activities may be such an irrational object of disfavor that, if they are targeted, and if they also happen to be engaged in exclusively or predominantly by a particular class of people, an intent to disfavor that class can readily be presumed.” 506 U.S. at 270, 113 S.Ct. 753. The Court provided, by way of example, that “[a] tax on wearing yarmulkes is a tax on Jews.” Id. Likewise, discrimination on the basis of one’s opposition to same-sex marriage is discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation.

¶ 40 We reject Masterpiece's related argument that its willingness to sell birthday cakes, cookies, and other non-wedding cake products to gay and lesbian customers establishes that it did not violate CADA. Masterpiece's potential compliance with CADA in this respect does not permit it to refuse services to Craig and Mullins that it otherwise offers to the general public. See Elane Photography, 309 P.3d at 62 (“[I]f a restaurant offers a full menu to male customers, it may not refuse to serve entrees to women, even if it will serve them appetizers.... Elane Photography's willingness to offer some services to [a woman entering a same-sex marriage] does not cure its refusal to provide other services that it offered to the general public.”).⁸

⁸ This case is distinguishable from the Colorado Civil Rights Division's recent findings that Azucar Bakery, Le Bakery Sensual, and Gateaux, Ltd., in Denver did not discriminate against a Christian patron on the basis of his creed when it refused his requests to create two bible-shaped cakes inscribed with derogatory messages about gays, including “Homosexuality is a detestable sin. Leviticus 18:2.” Jack v. Azucar Bakery, Charge No. P20140069X, at 2 (Colo. Civil Rights Div. Mar. 25, 2015), available at <http://perma.cc/5K6D-VV8U>; Jack v. Le Bakery Sensual, Inc., Charge No. P20140070X (Colo. Civil Rights Div. Mar. 24, 2015), available at <http://perma.cc/35BW-9C2N>; Jack v. Gateaux, Ltd., Charge No. P20140071X (Colo. Civil Rights Div. Mar. 24, 2015), available at <http://perma.cc/JN4U-NE6V>. The Division found that the bakeries did not refuse the patron's request because of his creed, but rather because of the offensive nature of the requested message. Importantly, there was no evidence that the bakeries based their decisions on the patron's religion, and evidence had established that all three regularly created cakes with Christian themes. Conversely, Masterpiece admits that its decision to refuse Craig's and Mullins' requested wedding cake was because of its opposition to same-sex marriage which, based on Supreme Court precedent, we conclude is tantamount to discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation.

For the same reason, this case is distinguishable from a Kentucky trial court's decision that a T-shirt printing company did not violate Lexington–Fayette County's public accommodations ordinance when it refused to print T-shirts celebrating premarital romantic and sexual relationships among gays and lesbians. See Hands on Originals, Inc. v. Lexington–Fayette Urban Cnty. Human Rights Comm'n, No. 14-CI-04474, slip op. at 9 (Fayette Cir. Ct. Apr. 27, 2015), available at <http://perma.cc/75FY-Z77D>.

There, evidence established that the T-shirt printer treated homosexual and heterosexual groups alike. Id. Specifically, in the previous three years, the printer had declined several orders for T-shirts promoting premarital romantic and sexual relationships between heterosexual individuals, including those portraying strip clubs and sexually explicit videos. Id. Although the print shop, like Masterpiece, based its refusal on its opposition to a particular conduct—premarital sexual relationships—such conduct is not “exclusively or predominantly” engaged in by a particular class of people protected by a public accommodations statute. See Bray v. Alexandria Women's Health Clinic, 506 U.S. 263, 270, 113 S.Ct. 753, 122 L.Ed.2d 34 (1993). Opposition to premarital romantic and sexual relationships, unlike opposition to same-sex marriage, is not tantamount to discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation.

*8 ¶ 41 Finally, Masterpiece argues that the ALJ wrongly presumed that only same-sex couples engage in same-sex marriage. In support, it references the case of two heterosexual New Zealanders who married in connection with a radio talk show contest. However, as the Bray court explained, we do not distinguish between conduct and status where the targeted conduct is engaged in “predominantly by a particular class of people.” 506 U.S. at 270, 113 S.Ct. 753. An isolated example of two heterosexual men marrying does not persuade us that same-sex marriage is not predominantly, and almost exclusively, engaged in by gays, lesbians, and bisexuals.

¶ 42 Therefore, we conclude that the ALJ did not err by concluding that Masterpiece refused to create a wedding cake for Craig and Mullins “because of” their sexual orientation. CADA prohibits places of public accommodations from basing their refusal to serve customers on their sexual orientation, and Masterpiece violated Colorado's public accommodations law by refusing to create a wedding cake for Craig's and Mullins' same-sex wedding celebration.

¶ 43 Having concluded that Masterpiece violated CADA, we next consider whether the Commission's application of the law under these circumstances violated Masterpiece's rights to freedom of speech and free exercise of religion protected by the United States and Colorado Constitutions.

IV. Compelled Expressive Conduct and Symbolic Speech

¶ 44 Masterpiece contends that the Commission's cease and desist order compels speech in violation of the First Amendment by requiring it to create wedding cakes for same-sex weddings. Masterpiece argues that wedding cakes inherently convey a celebratory message about marriage and, therefore, the Commission's order unconstitutionally compels it to convey a celebratory message about same-sex marriage in conflict with its religious beliefs.

¶ 45 We disagree. We conclude that the Commission's order merely requires that Masterpiece not discriminate against potential customers in violation of CADA and that such conduct, even if compelled by the government, is not sufficiently expressive to warrant First Amendment protections.

A. Standard of Review

¶ 46 Whether the Commission's order unconstitutionally infringes on Masterpiece's right to the freedom of expression protected by the First Amendment is a question of law that we review de novo. Bose Corp. v. Consumers Union, 466 U.S. 485, 499, 104 S.Ct. 1949, 80 L.Ed.2d 502 (1984); Lewis v. Colo. Rockies Baseball Club, Ltd., 941 P.2d 266, 270–71 (Colo.1997).

B. Applicable Law

[4] ¶ 47 The First Amendment of the United States Constitution prohibits laws “abridging the freedom of speech.” U.S. Const. amend. I; Nev. Comm’n on Ethics v. Carrigan, 564 U.S. —, —, 131 S.Ct. 2343, 2347, 180 L.Ed.2d 150 (2011); Curious Theatre Co. v. Colo. Dep’t of Pub. Health & Env’t, 220 P.3d 544, 551 (Colo.2009) (“The guarantees of the First Amendment are applicable to the states through the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment.”). Article II, section 10 of the Colorado Constitution, which provides greater protection of free speech than does the First Amendment, see Lewis, 941 P.2d at 271, provides that “[n]o law shall be passed impairing the freedom of speech; every person shall be free to speak, write or publish whatever he will on any subject.”⁹

⁹ Although Masterpiece observes that the Colorado Constitution provides greater liberty of speech than the United States Constitution, it does not distinguish the two, and its argument relies almost exclusively on federal

First Amendment case law. Therefore, we will not distinguish the First Amendment and article II, section 10 as applied to Masterpiece's freedom of speech claim.

*9 [5] ¶ 48 The freedom of speech protected by the First Amendment includes the “right to refrain from speaking” and prohibits the government from telling people what they must say. Wooley v. Maynard, 430 U.S. 705, 714, 97 S.Ct. 1428, 51 L.Ed.2d 752 (1977); Rumsfeld v. Forum for Academic & Institutional Rights, Inc., 547 U.S. 47, 61, 126 S.Ct. 1297, 164 L.Ed.2d 156 (2006) (hereafter FAIR); In re Hickenlooper, 2013 CO 62, ¶ 23, 312 P.3d 153. This compelled speech doctrine, on which Masterpiece relies, was first articulated by the Supreme Court in West Virginia Board of Education v. Barnette, 319 U.S. 624, 63 S.Ct. 1178, 87 L.Ed. 1628 (1943), and has been applied in two lines of cases.

¶ 49 The first line of cases prohibits the government from requiring that an individual “speak the government's message.” FAIR, 547 U.S. at 63, 126 S.Ct. 1297; see also Wooley, 430 U.S. at 715–17, 97 S.Ct. 1428 (holding that New Hampshire could not require individuals to have its slogan “Live Free or Die” on their license plates); Barnette, 319 U.S. at 642, 63 S.Ct. 1178 (holding that West Virginia could not require students to salute the American flag and recite the Pledge of Allegiance).

[6] [7] ¶ 50 These cases establish that the government cannot “prescribe what shall be orthodox in politics, nationalism, religion, or other matters of opinion” by forcing individuals to publicly disseminate its own ideological message. Barnette, 319 U.S. at 642, 63 S.Ct. 1178. The government also cannot require “the dissemination of an ideological message by displaying it on [an individual's] private property in a manner and for the express purpose that it be observed and read by the public.” Wooley, 430 U.S. at 713, 97 S.Ct. 1428; Barnette, 319 U.S. at 642, 63 S.Ct. 1178 (observing that the state cannot “invade[] the sphere of intellect and spirit which it is the purpose of the First Amendment to our Constitution to reserve from all official control”).

[8] ¶ 51 The second line of compelled speech cases establishes that the government may not require an individual “to host or accommodate another speaker's message.” FAIR, 547 U.S. at 63, 126 S.Ct. 1297. For example, in Miami Herald Publishing Co. v. Tornillo, 418 U.S. 241, 244, 94 S.Ct. 2831, 41 L.Ed.2d 730 (1974), the Supreme Court invalidated a Florida law which provided that, if a local newspaper criticized a candidate for public office, the candidate could demand that the newspaper publish his or her reply to the criticism free of charge. Similarly, in Pacific Gas & Electric Co. v. Public Utilities Commission of California, 475 U.S. 1, 4, 106 S.Ct. 903, 89 L.Ed.2d 1 (1986), the Supreme Court struck down a California Public Utilities Commission regulation that permitted third-party intervenors in ratemaking proceedings to include messages in the utility's billing envelopes, which it distributed to customers. These cases establish that the government may not commandeer a private speaker's means of accessing its audience by requiring that the speaker disseminate a third-party's message.

[9] [10] ¶ 52 The Supreme Court has also recognized that some forms of conduct are symbolic speech and deserve First Amendment protections. United States v. O'Brien, 391 U.S. 367, 376, 88 S.Ct. 1673, 20 L.Ed.2d 672 (1968) (holding that the public burning of draft cards during anti-war protest is a form of expressive conduct). However, because “[i]t is possible to find some kernel of expression in almost every activity a person undertakes,” City of Dallas v. Stanglin, 490 U.S. 19, 25, 109 S.Ct. 1591, 104 L.Ed.2d 18 (1989), the Supreme Court has rejected the view that “conduct can be labeled ‘speech’ whenever the person engaging in the conduct intends thereby to express an idea,” FAIR, 547 U.S. at 65–66, 126 S.Ct. 1297 (some internal quotation marks omitted). Rather, First Amendment protections extend only to conduct that is “inherently expressive.” Id.

*10 [11] [12] ¶ 53 In deciding whether conduct is “inherently expressive,” we ask whether “ ‘[a]n intent to convey a particularized message was present, and [whether] the likelihood was great that the message would be understood by those who viewed it.’ ” Texas v. Johnson, 491 U.S. 397, 404, 109 S.Ct. 2533, 105 L.Ed.2d 342 (1989) (quoting Spence v. Washington, 418 U.S. 405, 410–11, 94 S.Ct. 2727, 41 L.Ed.2d 842 (1974)). The message need not be “narrow,” or “succinctly articulable.” Hurley v. Irish–American Gay, Lesbian & Bisexual Group of Boston, 515 U.S. 557, 569, 115 S.Ct. 2338, 132 L.Ed.2d 487 (1995). The Supreme Court has recognized expressive conduct in several cases. See, e.g., id. (marching in a parade in support of gay and lesbian rights); United States v. Eichman, 496 U.S. 310, 312–19, 110 S.Ct. 2404, 110 L.Ed.2d 287 (1990) (burning of the American flag in protest of government policies); Johnson, 491 U.S. at 399, 109 S.Ct. 2533 (burning of the American flag in protest of Reagan administration and various corporate policies); Nat'l Socialist Party of Am. v. Vill. of Skokie, 432 U.S. 43, 43, 97 S.Ct. 2205, 53 L.Ed.2d 96 (1977) (wearing of a swastika in a parade); Tinker v. Des Moines Indep. Cmty.

Sch. Dist., 393 U.S. 503, 505–06, 89 S.Ct. 733, 21 L.Ed.2d 731 (1969) (wearing an armband in protest of war).

¶ 54 However, other decisions have declined to recognize certain conduct as expressive. See Carrigan, 564 U.S. at —, 131 S.Ct. at 2350 (legislators' act of voting not expressive because it “symbolizes nothing” about their reasoning); Jacobs v. Clark Cnty. Sch. Dist., 526 F.3d 419, 437–38 (9th Cir.2008) (wearing of nondescript school uniform did not convey particularized message of uniformity).

[13] [14] ¶ 55 Masterpiece's contentions involve claims of compelled expressive conduct. In such cases, the threshold question is whether the compelled conduct is sufficiently expressive to trigger First Amendment protections. See Jacobs, 526 F.3d at 437–38 (threshold question in plaintiff's claim that school uniform policy constituted compelled expressive conduct is whether the wearing of a uniform conveys symbolic messages and therefore was expressive). The party asserting that conduct is expressive bears the burden of demonstrating that the First Amendment applies and the party must advance more than a mere “plausible contention” that its conduct is expressive. Clark v. Cmty. for Creative Non-Violence, 468 U.S. 288, 293 n. 5, 104 S.Ct. 3065, 82 L.Ed.2d 221 (1984).

[15] ¶ 56 Finally, a conclusion that the Commission's order compels expressive conduct does not necessarily mean that the order is unconstitutional. If it does compel such conduct, the question is then whether the government has sufficient justification for regulating the conduct. The Supreme Court has recognized that “when ‘speech’ and ‘non-speech’ elements are combined in the same course of conduct, a sufficiently important governmental interest in regulating the non-speech element can justify incidental limitations on First Amendment freedoms.” O'Brien, 391 U.S. at 376, 88 S.Ct. 1673. In other words, the government can regulate communicative conduct if it has an important interest unrelated to the suppression of the message and if the impact on the communication is no more than necessary to achieve the government's purpose. Id.; see also Barnes v. Glen Theatre Inc., 501 U.S. 560, 567–68, 111 S.Ct. 2456, 115 L.Ed.2d 504 (1991); Johnson, 491 U.S. at 407, 109 S.Ct. 2533.

C. Analysis

[16] ¶ 57 Masterpiece contends that wedding cakes inherently communicate a celebratory message about marriage and that, by forcing it to make cakes for same-sex weddings, the Commission's cease and desist order unconstitutionally compels it to express a celebratory message about same-sex marriage that it does not support. We disagree.

¶ 58 The ALJ rejected Masterpiece's argument that preparing a wedding cake for same-sex weddings necessarily involves expressive conduct. He recognized that baking and creating a wedding cake involves skill and artistry, but nonetheless concluded that, because Phillips refused to prepare a cake for Craig and Mullins before any discussion of the cake's design, the ALJ could not determine whether Craig's and Mullins' desired wedding cake would constitute symbolic speech subject to First Amendment protections.

*11 ¶ 59 Masterpiece argues that the ALJ wrongly considered whether the "conduct" of creating a cake is expressive, and not whether the product of that conduct, the wedding cake itself, constitutes symbolic expression. It asserts that the ALJ wrongly employed the test for expressive conduct instead of that for compelled speech. However, Masterpiece's argument mistakenly presumes that the legal doctrines involving compelled speech and expressive conduct are mutually exclusive. As noted, because the First Amendment only protects conduct that conveys a message, the threshold question in cases involving expressive conduct—or as here, compelled expressive conduct—is whether the conduct in question is sufficiently expressive so as to trigger First Amendment protections. See Jacobs, 526 F.3d at 437–38.

¶ 60 We begin by identifying the compelled conduct in question. As noted, the Commission's order requires that Masterpiece "cease and desist from discriminating against [Craig and Mullins] and other same-sex couples by refusing to sell them wedding cakes or any product [it] would sell to heterosexual couples." Therefore, the compelled conduct is the Colorado government's mandate that Masterpiece comport with CADA by not basing its decision to serve a potential client, at least in part, on the client's sexual orientation. This includes a requirement that Masterpiece sell wedding cakes to same-sex couples, but only if it wishes to serve heterosexual couples in the same manner.

¶ 61 Next, we ask whether, by comporting with CADA and ceasing to discriminate against potential customers on the basis of their sexual orientation, Masterpiece conveys a particularized message celebrating same-sex marriage, and whether the likelihood is great that a reasonable observer would both understand the message and attribute that message to Masterpiece. See Spence, 418 U.S. at 410–11, 94 S.Ct. 2727.

¶ 62 We conclude that the act of designing and selling a wedding cake to all customers free of discrimination does not convey a celebratory message about same-sex weddings likely to be understood by those who view it. We further conclude that, to the extent that the public infers from a Masterpiece wedding cake a message celebrating same-sex marriage, that message is more likely to be attributed to the customer than to Masterpiece.

¶ 63 First, Masterpiece does not convey a message supporting same-sex marriages merely by abiding by the law and serving its customers equally. In FAIR, several law schools challenged a federal law that denied funding to institutions of higher education that either prohibit or prevent military recruiters from accessing their campuses. 547 U.S. at 64–65, 126 S.Ct. 1297. The law schools argued that, by forcing them to treat military and nonmilitary recruiters alike, the law compelled them to send "the message that they see nothing wrong with the military's policies [regarding gays in the military], when they do." Id. The Court rejected this argument, observing that students "can appreciate the difference between speech a school sponsors and speech the school permits because legally required to do so." Id. at 65, 126 S.Ct. 1297; see also Rosenberger v. Rector & Visitors of Univ. of Va., 515 U.S. 819, 841–42, 115 S.Ct. 2510, 132 L.Ed.2d 700 (1995); PruneYard Shopping Ctr. v. Robins, 447 U.S. 74, 76–78, 100 S.Ct. 2035, 64 L.Ed.2d 741 (1980).

¶ 64 As in FAIR, we conclude that, because CADA prohibits all places of public accommodation from discriminating against customers because of their sexual orientation, it is unlikely that the public would view Masterpiece's creation of a cake for a same-sex wedding celebration as an endorsement of that conduct. Rather, we conclude that a reasonable observer would understand that Masterpiece's compliance with the law is not a reflection of its own beliefs.

¶ 65 The Elane Photography court distinguished Wooley and Barnette, and similarly concluded that New Mexico's public accommodations law did not compel the photographer to convey any particularized message, but rather "only mandates that if Elane Photography operates a business as a public accommodation, it cannot discriminate against potential clients based on their sexual orientation.” 309 P.3d at 64. It concluded that “[r]easonable observers are unlikely to interpret Elane Photography’s photographs as an endorsement of the photographed events.” Id. at 69. We are persuaded by this reasoning and similarly conclude that CADA does not compel expressive conduct.¹⁰

¹⁰ The Oregon Bureau of Labor and Industry and the New Jersey Division of Civil Rights reached similar conclusions in related cases. See Bernstein v. Ocean Grove Camp Meeting Ass’n, No. CRT 614509, at 13 (N.J. Div. Civil Rights Oct. 22, 2012), available at <http://perma.cc/G5VF-ZS2M> (“Because there was no message inherent in renting the Pavilion, there was no credible threat to Respondent’s ability to express its views.”); In the Matter of Klein, 2015 WL 4503460, at *72 (“[T]hat Respondents bake a wedding cake for Complainants is not ‘compelled speech’ that violates the free speech clause of the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.”).

*12 [17] ¶ 66 We do not suggest that Masterpiece’s status as a for-profit bakery strips it of its First Amendment speech protections. See Citizens United v. Fed. Election Comm’n, 558 U.S. 310, 365, 130 S.Ct. 876, 175 L.Ed.2d 753 (2010) (recognizing that corporations have free speech rights and holding that government cannot suppress speech on the basis of the speaker’s corporate identity). However, we must consider the allegedly expressive conduct within “the context in which it occurred.” Johnson, 491 U.S. at 405, 109 S.Ct. 2533. The public recognizes that, as a for-profit bakery, Masterpiece charges its customers for its goods and services. The fact that an entity charges for its goods and services reduces the likelihood that a reasonable observer will believe that it supports the message expressed in its finished product. Nothing in the record supports the conclusion that a reasonable observer would interpret Masterpiece’s providing a wedding cake for a same-sex couple as an endorsement of same-sex marriage, rather than a reflection of its desire to conduct business in accordance with Colorado’s public accommodations law. See FAIR, 547 U.S. at 64–65, 126 S.Ct. 1297.

¶ 67 For the same reason, this case also differs from Hurley, on which Masterpiece relies. There, the Supreme Court concluded that Massachusetts’ public accommodations statute could not require parade organizers to include among the marchers in a St. Patrick’s Day parade a group imparting a message the organizers did not wish to convey. 515 U.S. at 559, 115 S.Ct. 2338. Central to the Court’s conclusion was the “inherent expressiveness of marching to make a point,” and its observation that a “parade’s overall message is distilled from the individual presentations along the way, and each unit’s expression is perceived by spectators as part of the whole.” Id. at 568, 577, 115 S.Ct. 2338. The Court concluded that spectators would likely attribute each marcher’s message to the parade organizers as a whole. Id. at 57677.

¶ 68 In contrast, it is unlikely that the public would understand Masterpiece’s sale of wedding cakes to same-sex couples as endorsing a celebratory message about same-sex marriage. See Elane Photography, 309 P.3d at 68 (“While photography may be expressive, the operation of a photography business is not.”); see also Rosenberger, 515 U.S. at 841–42, 115 S.Ct. 2510 (observers not likely to mistake views of university-supported religious newspaper with those of the university); Turner Broad. Sys., Inc. v. FCC, 512 U.S. 622, 655, 114 S.Ct. 2445, 129 L.Ed.2d 497 (1994) (cable viewers likely would not assume that the broadcasts carried on a cable system convey ideas or messages endorsed by the cable operators); PruneYard, 447 U.S. at 81, 100 S.Ct. 2035 (observers not likely to attribute speakers’ message to owner of shopping center); Nathanson v. Mass. Comm’n Against Discrimination, No. 199901657, 2003 WL 22480688, at *6–*7 (Mass.Super.Ct. Sept. 16, 2003) (rejecting attorney’s First Amendment compelled speech defense because she “operates more as a conduit for the speech and expression of the client, rather than as a speaker for herself”).

¶ 69 By selling a wedding cake to a same-sex couple, Masterpiece does not necessarily lead an observer to conclude that the bakery supports its customer’s conduct. The public has no way of knowing the reasons supporting Masterpiece’s decision to serve or decline to serve a same-sex couple. Someone observing that a commercial bakery created a wedding cake for a straight couple or that it did not create one for a gay couple would have no way of deciphering whether the bakery’s conduct took place because of its views on same-sex marriage or for some other reason.

¶ 70 We also find the Supreme Court’s holding in Carrigan instructive. 564 U.S. at —, 131 S.Ct. at 2346. There, the Court concluded that legislators do not have a personal, First Amendment right to vote in the legislative body in which they serve, and that restrictions on legislators’ voting imposed by a law requiring recusal in instances of conflicts of interest are not restrictions on their protected speech. Id. The Court rejected the argument that the act of voting was expressive conduct subject to First Amendment protections. Id. Although the Court recognized that voting “discloses ... that the legislator wishes (for whatever reason) that the proposition on the floor be adopted,” it “symbolizes nothing” and is not “an act of communication” because it does not convey the legislator’s reasons for the vote. Id. at —, 131 S.Ct. at 2350.

*13 ¶ 71 We recognize that a wedding cake, in some circumstances, may convey a particularized message celebrating same-sex marriage and, in such cases, First Amendment speech protections may be implicated. However, we need not reach this issue. We note, again, that Phillips denied Craig’s and Mullins’ request without any discussion regarding the wedding cake’s design or any possible written inscriptions.

¶ 72 Finally, CADA does not preclude Masterpiece from expressing its views on same-sex marriage—including its religious opposition to it—and the bakery remains free to disassociate itself from its customers’ viewpoints. We recognize that section 24–34–601(2)(a) of CADA prohibits Masterpiece from displaying or disseminating a notice stating that it will refuse to provide its services based on a customer’s desire to engage in same-sex marriage or indicating that those engaging in same-sex marriage are unwelcome at the bakery.¹¹ However, CADA does not prevent Masterpiece from posting a disclaimer in the store or on the Internet indicating that the provision of its services does not constitute an endorsement or approval of conduct protected by CADA. Masterpiece could also post or otherwise disseminate a message indicating that CADA requires it not to discriminate on the basis of sexual orientation and other protected characteristics. Such a message would likely have the effect of disassociating Masterpiece from its customers’ conduct. See PruneYard, 447 U.S. at 87, 100 S.Ct. 2035 (“[S]igns, for example could disclaim any sponsorship of the message and could explain that the persons are communicating their own messages by virtue of state law.”).

¹¹ Section 24–34–601(2)(a) reads:

It is discriminatory practice and unlawful for a [place of public accommodation] ... to publish, circulate, issue, display, post, or mail any written, electronic, or printed communication, notice, or advertisement that indicates that the full and equal enjoyment of the goods, services, facilities, privileges, advantages, or accommodations of a place of public accommodation will be refused, withheld from, or denied an individual or that an individual’s patronage or presence at a place of public accommodation is unwelcome, objectionable, unacceptable, or undesirable because of disability, race, creed, color, sex, sexual orientation, marital status, national origin, or ancestry.

¶ 73 Therefore, we conclude that the Commission’s order requiring Masterpiece not to discriminate against potential customers because of their sexual orientation does not force it to engage in compelled expressive conduct in violation of the First Amendment. Accordingly, because we conclude that the compelled conduct here is not expressive, the State need not show that it has an important interest in enforcing CADA.

V. First Amendment and Article II, Section 4—Free Exercise of Religion

¶ 74 Next, Masterpiece contends that the Commission’s order unconstitutionally infringes on its right to the free exercise of religion guaranteed by the First Amendment of the United States Constitution and article II, section 4 of the Colorado Constitution. We conclude that CADA is a neutral law of general applicability and, therefore, offends neither the First Amendment nor article II, section 4.

A. Standard of Review

¶ 75 Whether the Commission’s order unconstitutionally infringes on Masterpiece’s free exercise rights, protected by the First Amendment and article II, section 4, is a question of law that we review de novo. § 24–4–106.

B. Applicable Law

*14 ¶ 76 The Free Exercise Clause of the First Amendment provides: “Congress shall make no law ... prohibiting the free exercise [of religion].” U.S. Const. amend I. The First Amendment is binding on the States through incorporation by the Fourteenth Amendment. See Cantwell v. Connecticut, 310 U.S. 296, 60 S.Ct. 900, 84 L.Ed. 1213 (1940). Article II, section 4 of the Colorado Constitution provides: “The free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship, without discrimination, shall forever hereafter be guaranteed.”

[18] [19] ¶ 77 “The free exercise of religion means, first and foremost, the right to believe and profess whatever religious doctrine one desires.” Emp’t Div., Dep’t of Human Res. v. Smith, 494 U.S. 872, 877, 110 S.Ct. 1595, 108 L.Ed.2d 876 (1990), superseded on other grounds by statute as stated in Holt v. Hobbs, 574 U.S. —, 135 S.Ct. 853, 190 L.Ed.2d 747 (2015); see also Van Osdol v. Vogt, 908 P.2d 1122, 1126 (Colo.1996). Free exercise of religion also involves the “performance of (or abstention from) physical acts.” Smith, 494 U.S. at 877, 110 S.Ct. 1595.

¶ 78 Before the Supreme Court’s decision in Smith, the Court consistently used a balancing test to determine whether a challenged government action violated the Free Exercise Clause of the First Amendment. See Wisconsin v. Yoder, 406 U.S. 205, 215, 92 S.Ct. 1526, 32 L.Ed.2d 15 (1972); Sherbert v. Verner, 374 U.S. 398, 403, 83 S.Ct. 1790, 10 L.Ed.2d 965 (1963). That test considered whether the challenged government action imposed a substantial burden on the practice of religion, and, if so, whether that burden was justified by a compelling government interest. Sherbert, 374 U.S. at 403, 83 S.Ct. 1790.

¶ 79 In Smith, the Court disavowed Sherbert’s balancing test and concluded that the Free Exercise Clause “does not relieve an individual of the obligation to comply with a valid and neutral law of general applicability on the ground that the law proscribes (or prescribes) conduct that his religion prescribes (or proscribes).” Smith, 494 U.S. at 879, 110 S.Ct. 1595 (internal quotation marks omitted). The Court held that neutral laws of general applicability need only be rationally related to a legitimate governmental interest in order to survive a constitutional challenge. Id. As a general rule, such laws do not offend the Free Exercise Clause.¹²

¹² In the wake of Smith, Congress passed the Religious Freedom Restoration Act (RFRA), which restored the Sherbert balancing test and provides that if government action substantially burdens a person’s exercise of religion, the person is entitled to an exemption from the rule unless the government can demonstrate that the application of the burden to the person is the least restrictive means of furthering a compelling government interest. 42 U.S.C. § 2000bb–1(b) (1994). In City of Boerne v. Flores, 521 U.S. 507, 532, 117 S.Ct. 2157, 138 L.Ed.2d 624 (1997), superseded by statute as stated in Burwell v. Hobby Lobby Stores, Inc., 573 U.S. —, 134 S.Ct. 2751, 189 L.Ed.2d 675 (2014), the Supreme Court held that RFRA was unconstitutional as applied to the states. Colorado has not enacted a similar law, although many states have. See 2 W. Cole Durham et al., Religious Organizations and the Law § 10:53 (2015) (observing that sixteen states—Alabama, Arizona, Connecticut, Florida, Idaho, Illinois, Louisiana, Missouri, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, and Virginia—have passed versions of RFRA to restore pre-Smith scrutiny to their own laws that burden religious exercise).

[20] ¶ 80 However, if a law burdens a religious practice and is not neutral or not generally applicable, it “must be justified by a compelling government interest” and must be narrowly tailored to advance that interest. Smith, 494 U.S. at 883, 110 S.Ct. 1595; Van Osdol, 908 P.2d at 1126.

C. Analysis

1. First Amendment Free Exercise

*15 ¶ 81 Masterpiece contends that its claim is not governed by Smith’s rational basis exception to general strict scrutiny review of free exercise claims for two reasons: (1) CADA is not “neutral and generally applicable” and (2) its claim is a “hybrid” that implicates both its free exercise and free expression rights.¹³ Again, we disagree.

¹³ The parties do not address whether for-profit entities like Masterpiece Cakeshop have free exercise rights under the First Amendment and article II, section 4 of the Colorado Constitution. Citing the Tenth Circuit’s opinion in Hobby Lobby Stores, Inc. v. Sebelius, 723 F.3d 1114, 1137 (10th Cir.2013), the ALJ noted that “closely held for-profit business entities like Masterpiece Cakeshop also enjoy a First Amendment right to free exercise of religion.” That decision was later affirmed by the Supreme Court. See Burwell, 573 U.S. at —, 134 S.Ct. at 2758.

However, both the Tenth Circuit and the Supreme Court held only that RFRA’s reference to “persons” includes for-profit corporations like Hobby Lobby, and therefore that federal regulations restricting the activities of closely held for-profit corporation like Hobby Lobby must comply with RFRA. See id. at —, 134 S.Ct. at 2775 (“[W]e hold that a federal regulation’s restriction on the activities of a for-profit closely held corporation must comply with RFRA.”); Hobby Lobby, 723 F.3d at 1137 (“[W]e conclude that ... Hobby Lobby and Mardel ... qualify as “persons” under RFRA.”). Because RFRA does not apply to state laws infringing on religious freedoms,

City of Boerne, 521 U.S. at 532, 117 S.Ct. 2157, it is unclear whether Masterpiece (as opposed to Phillips) enjoys First Amendment free exercise rights. Further, because Colorado appellate courts have not addressed the issue, it is similarly unclear whether Masterpiece has free exercise rights under article II, section 4. Regardless, because the parties do not address this issue—and because our conclusion does not require us to do so—we will assume, without deciding, that Masterpiece has free exercise rights under both the First Amendment and article II, section 4.

[21] [22] ¶ 82 First, we address Masterpiece's contention that CADA is not neutral and not generally applicable. A law is not neutral “if the object of a law is to infringe upon or restrict practices because of their religious motivation.” Church of Lukumi Babalu Aye, Inc. v. City of Hialeah, 508 U.S. 520, 533, 113 S.Ct. 2217, 124 L.Ed.2d 472 (1993). A law is not generally applicable when it imposes burdens on religiously motivated conduct while permitting exceptions for secular conduct or for favored religions. Id. at 543, 113 S.Ct. 2217. The Supreme Court has explained that an improper intent to discriminate can be inferred where a law is a “religious gerrymander []” that burdens religious conduct while exempting similar secular activity. Id. at 534, 113 S.Ct. 2217. If a law is either not neutral or not generally applicable, it “must be justified by a compelling governmental interest and must be narrowly tailored to advance that interest.” Id. at 531–32, 113 S.Ct. 2217.

¶ 83 The Court has found only one law to be neither neutral nor generally applicable. In Church of Lukumi, the Court considered the constitutionality of a municipal ordinance prohibiting ritual animal sacrifice. Id. at 534, 113 S.Ct. 2217. The law applied to any individual or group that “kills, slaughters, or sacrifices animals for any type of ritual, regardless of whether or not the flesh or blood of the animals is to be consumed.” Id. at 527, 113 S.Ct. 2217 (internal quotation marks omitted).

*16 ¶ 84 Considering that the ordinance's terms such as “sacrifice” and “ritual” could be either secular or religious, the Court nevertheless concluded that the law was not neutral because its purpose was to impede certain practices of the Santeria religion. Id. at 534, 113 S.Ct. 2217. The Court further concluded that the law was not generally applicable because it exempted the killing of animals for several secular purposes, including the killing of animals in secular slaughterhouses, hunting, fishing, euthanasia of unwanted animals, and extermination of pests, id. at 526–28, 536, 543–44, 113 S.Ct. 2217, as well as the killing of animals by some religions, including at kosher slaughterhouses, id. at 536–37, 113 S.Ct. 2217.

a. Neutral Law of General Applicability

[23] ¶ 85 Masterpiece contends that, like the law in Church of Lukumi, CADA is neither neutral nor generally applicable. First, it argues that CADA is not generally applicable because it provides exemptions for “places principally used for religious purposes” such as churches, synagogues, and mosques, see § 24–34–601(1), as well as places that restrict admission to one gender because of a bona fide relationship to its services, see § 24–34–601(3). Second, it argues that the law is not neutral because it exempts “places principally used for religious purposes,” but not Masterpiece.

[24] ¶ 86 We conclude that CADA is generally applicable, notwithstanding its exemptions. A law need not apply to every individual and entity to be generally applicable; rather, it is generally applicable so long as it does not regulate only religiously motivated conduct. See Church of Lukumi, 508 U.S. at 542–43, 113 S.Ct. 2217 (“[I]nequality results when a legislature decides that the governmental interests it seeks to advance are worthy of being pursued only against conduct with a religious motivation.”). CADA does not discriminate on the basis of religion; rather, it exempts certain public accommodations that are “principally used for religious purposes.” § 24–34–601(1).

¶ 87 In this regard, CADA does not impede the free exercise of religion. Rather, its exemption for “places principally used for religious purposes” reflects an attempt by the General Assembly to reduce legal burdens on religious organizations and comport with the free exercise doctrine. Such exemptions are commonplace throughout Colorado law, e.g., § 24–34–402(7) (exempting religious organizations and associations from employment discrimination laws); § 24–34–502(3), C.R.S.2014 (exempting religious organizations and institutions from several requirements of housing discrimination laws), and, in some cases, are constitutionally mandated. See, e.g., Hosanna–Tabor Evangelical Lutheran Church & Sch. v. EEOC, 565 U.S. —, —, 132 S.Ct. 694, 705–06, 181 L.Ed.2d 650 (2012) (holding that the First Amendment prohibits application of employment discrimination laws to disputes between religious organizations and their ministers).

¶ 88 Further, CADA is generally applicable because it does not exempt secular conduct from its reach. Church of Lukumi, 508 U.S. at 543, 113 S.Ct. 2217 (Laws are not generally applicable when they “impose burdens” “in a selective manner.”). In this respect, CADA’s exemption for places that restrict admission to one gender because of a bona fide relationship to its services does not discriminate on the basis of religion. On its face, it applies equally to religious and nonreligious conduct, and therefore is generally applicable.

¶ 89 Second, we conclude that CADA is neutral. Masterpiece asserts that CADA is not neutral because, although it exempts “places primarily used for religious purposes,” Masterpiece is not exempt. However, Masterpiece does not contend that its bakery is primarily used for religious purposes. CADA forbids all discrimination based on sexual orientation regardless of its motivation. Further, the existence of an exemption for religious entities undermines Masterpiece’s contention that the law discriminates against its conduct because of its religious character. See Priests for Life v. Dep’t of Health & Human Servs., 772 F.3d 229, 268 (D.C.Cir.2014) (“[T]he existence of an exemption for religious employers substantially undermines contentions that government is hostile towards such employers’ religion.”).

*17 ¶ 90 Finally, we reiterate that CADA does not compel Masterpiece to support or endorse any particular religious views. The law merely prohibits Masterpiece from discriminating against potential customers on account of their sexual orientation. As one court observed in addressing a similar free exercise challenge to the 1964 Civil Rights Act:

Undoubtedly defendant ... has a constitutional right to espouse the religious beliefs of his own choosing, however, he does not have the absolute right to exercise and practice such beliefs in utter disregard of the clear constitutional rights of other citizens. This Court refuses to lend credence or support to his position that he has a constitutional right to refuse to serve members of the Negro race in his business establishment upon the ground that to do so would violate his sacred religious beliefs.

Newman v. Piggie Park Enters., Inc., 256 F.Supp. 941, 945 (D.S.C.1966), aff’d in relevant part and rev’d in part on other grounds, 377 F.2d 433 (4th Cir.1967), aff’d and modified on other grounds, 390 U.S. 400, 88 S.Ct. 964, 19 L.Ed.2d 1263 (1968).¹⁴ Likewise, Masterpiece remains free to continue espousing its religious beliefs, including its opposition to same-sex marriage. However, if it wishes to operate as a public accommodation and conduct business within the State of Colorado, CADA prohibits it from picking and choosing customers based on their sexual orientation.

14 At least two state supreme courts have rejected free exercise challenges to public accommodations laws in the commercial context, concluding that such laws are neutral and generally applicable. See Swanner v. Anchorage Equal Rights Comm’n, 874 P.2d 274, 279–80 (Alaska 1994) (Free Exercise Clause does not allow landlord to discriminate against unmarried couples in violation of public accommodations statute); North Coast Women’s Care Med. Grp., Inc. v. San Diego Cnty. Superior Court, 44 Cal.4th 1145, 81 Cal.Rptr.3d 708, 189 P.3d 959, 967 (2008) (“[T]he First Amendment’s right to the free exercise of religion does not exempt defendant physicians here from conforming their conduct to the Act’s antidiscrimination requirements even if compliance poses an incidental conflict with defendants’ religious beliefs.”).

¶ 91 Therefore, we conclude that CADA was not designed to impede religious conduct and does not impose burdens on religious conduct not imposed on secular conduct. Accordingly, CADA is a neutral law of general applicability.

b. “Hybrid” Rights Claim

¶ 92 Next, we address Masterpiece’s contention that its claim is not governed by Smith’s rational basis standard and that strict scrutiny review applies because its contention is a “hybrid” of both free exercise rights and free expression rights.

¶ 93 In Smith, the Supreme Court distinguished its holding from earlier cases applying strict scrutiny to laws infringing free exercise rights, explaining that the “only decisions in which we have held that the First Amendment bars application of a neutral, generally applicable law to religiously motivated actions have involved not the Free Exercise Clause alone, but the Free Exercise Clause in conjunction with other constitutional protections.” 494 U.S. at 881, 110 S.Ct. 1595. Masterpiece argues that this language created an exception for “hybrid-rights” claims, holding that a party can still establish a violation of the Free Exercise Clause, even where the challenged law is neutral and generally applicable, by showing that the claim comprises both the right to free exercise of religion and an independent constitutional right. Id.

*18 ¶ 94 We note that Colorado's appellate courts have not applied the “hybrid-rights” exception, and several decisions have cast doubt on its validity. See, e.g., Grace United Methodist Church v. City of Cheyenne, 451 F.3d 643, 656 (10th Cir.2006) (“The hybrid rights doctrine is controversial. It has been characterized as mere dicta not binding on lower courts, criticized as illogical, and dismissed as untenable.”(citations omitted)). Regardless, having concluded above that the Commission's order does not implicate Masterpiece's freedom of expression, even if we assume the “hybrid-rights” exception exists, it would not apply here.

¶ 95 Accordingly, we hold that CADA is a neutral law of general applicability, and does not offend the Free Exercise Clause of the First Amendment.

2. Article II, Section 4 Free Exercise of Religion

[25] ¶ 96 Masterpiece argues that, although neutral laws of general applicability do not violate the First Amendment, Smith, 494 U.S. at 879, 110 S.Ct. 1595, the Free Exercise Clause of the Colorado Constitution requires that we review such laws under heightened, strict scrutiny. We disagree.

¶ 97 Masterpiece gives two reasons supporting this assertion. First, it argues that Colorado appellate courts uniformly apply strict scrutiny to laws infringing fundamental rights. See, e.g., In re Parental Rights Concerning C.M., 74 P.3d 342, 344 (Colo.App.2002) (“A legislative enactment that infringes on a fundamental right is constitutionally permissible only if it is necessary to promote a compelling state interest and does so in the least restrictive manner possible.”). Second, it argues that the Colorado Constitution provides broader protections for individual rights than the United States Constitution. See, e.g., Lewis, 941 P.2d at 271 (Colorado Constitution provides greater free speech protection than the United States Constitution); Bock v. Westminster Mall Co., 819 P.2d 55, 58 (Colo.1991) (“Consistent with the United States Constitution, we may find that our state constitution guarantees greater protections of [free speech rights] than [are] guaranteed by the First Amendment.”).

¶ 98 We recognize that, with regard to some individual rights, the Colorado Constitution has been interpreted more broadly than the United States Constitution, and that we apply strict scrutiny to many infringements of fundamental rights. However, the Colorado Supreme Court has also recognized that article II, section 4 embodies “the same values of free exercise and governmental noninvolvement secured by the religious clauses of the First Amendment.” Ams. United for Separation of Church & State Fund, Inc. v. State, 648 P.2d 1072, 1081–82 (Colo.1982); see also Conrad v. City & Cnty. of Denver, 656 P.2d 662, 670–71 (Colo.1982) (“Because the federal and state constitutional provisions embody similar values, we look to the body of law that has been developed in the federal courts with respect to the meaning and application of the First Amendment for useful guidance.”); Young Life v. Div. of Emp't & Training, 650 P.2d 515, 526 (Colo.1982) (“Article II, Section 4 echoes the principle of constitutional neutrality underscoring the First Amendment.”).

¶ 99 Colorado appellate courts have consistently analyzed similar free exercise claims under the United States and Colorado Constitutions, and have regularly relied on federal precedent in interpreting article II, section 4. See, e.g., Ams. United, 648 P.2d at 1072; Conrad, 656 P.2d at 670; Young Life, 650 P.2d at 526; People in Interest of D.L.E., 645 P.2d 271, 275–76 (Colo.1982); Johnson v. Motor Vehicle Div., 197 Colo. 455, 458, 593 P.2d 1363, 1364 (1979); Pillar of Fire v. Denver Urban Renewal Auth., 181 Colo. 411, 416, 509 P.2d 1250, 1253 (1973); Zavilla v. Masse, 112 Colo. 183, 187, 147 P.2d 823, 825 (1944); In re Marriage of McSoud, 131 P.3d 1208, 1215 (Colo.App.2006); In the Interest of E.L.M.C., 100 P.3d 546, 563 (Colo.App.2004); see also Paul Benjamin Linton, Religious Freedom Claims and Defenses Under State Constitutions, 7 U. St. Thomas J.L. & Pub. Pol'y 103, 116–17 (2013) (observing that “a claim or defense that would not prevail under the Free Exercise Clause of the First Amendment would not likely prevail under article II, section 4, either”). Finally, the Colorado Supreme Court has never indicated that an alternative analysis should apply.

*19 ¶ 100 Given the consistency with which article II, section 4 has been interpreted using First Amendment case law—and in the absence of Colorado Supreme Court precedent suggesting otherwise—we hesitate to depart from First Amendment precedent in analyzing Masterpiece's claims. Therefore, we see no reason why Smith's holding—that neutral laws of general applicability do not offend the Free Exercise Clause—is not equally applicable to claims under article II, section 4, and we reject Masterpiece's contention that the Colorado Constitution requires the application of a heightened scrutiny test.

3. Rational Basis Review

[26] ¶ 101 Having concluded that CADA is neutral and generally applicable, we easily conclude that it is rationally related to Colorado's interest in eliminating discrimination in places of public accommodation. The Supreme Court has consistently recognized that states have a compelling interest in eliminating such discrimination and that statutes like CADA further that interest. See Hurley, 515 U.S. at 572, 115 S.Ct. 2338 (Public accommodation laws “are well within the State's usual power to enact when a legislature has reason to believe that a given group is the target of discrimination....”); see also Bd. of Dirs. of Rotary Int'l v. Rotary Club, 481 U.S. 537, 549, 107 S.Ct. 1940, 95 L.Ed.2d 474 (1987) (government had a compelling interest in eliminating discrimination against women in places of public accommodation); Roberts v. United States Jaycees, 468 U.S. 609, 623, 104 S.Ct. 3244, 82 L.Ed.2d 462 (1984) (same); Bob Jones Univ., 461 U.S. at 604, 103 S.Ct. 2017 (government had a compelling interest in eliminating racial discrimination in private education).

¶ 102 Without CADA, businesses could discriminate against potential patrons based on their sexual orientation. Such discrimination in places of public accommodation has measurable adverse economic effects. See Mich. Dep't of Civil Rights, Report on LGBT Inclusion Under Michigan Law with Recommendations for Action 74–90 (Jan. 28, 2013), available at <http://perma.cc/Q6UL-L3JR> (detailing the negative economic effects of anti-gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgender discrimination in places of public accommodation). CADA creates a hospitable environment for all consumers by preventing discrimination on the basis of certain characteristics, including sexual orientation. In doing so, it prevents the economic and social balkanization prevalent when businesses decide to serve only their own “kind,” and ensures that the goods and services provided by public accommodations are available to all of the state's citizens.

¶ 103 Therefore, CADA's proscription of sexual orientation discrimination by places of public accommodation is a reasonable regulation that does not offend the Free Exercise Clauses of the First Amendment and article II, section 4.

VI. Discovery Requests and Protective Order

[27] ¶ 104 We also disagree with Masterpiece's contention that the ALJ abused his discretion by denying it discovery as to the type of wedding cake Craig and Mullins intended to order and details of their wedding ceremony. See § 24–4–106(7); DCP Midstream v. Anadarko Petroleum Corp., 2013 CO 36, ¶ 24, 303 P.3d 1187, 1192 (rulings on motions to compel discovery reviewed for an abuse of discretion).

¶ 105 We agree with the ALJ's conclusion that these subjects were not relevant in resolving the essential issues at trial. The only issues before the ALJ were (1) whether Masterpiece violated CADA by categorically refusing to serve Craig and Mullins because of its opposition to same-sex marriage and, if so, (2) whether CADA, as applied to Masterpiece, violated its rights to freedom of expression and free exercise of religion. Evidence pertaining to Craig's and Mullins' wedding ceremony—including the nature of the cake they served—had no bearing on the legality of Masterpiece's conduct. The decision to categorically deny service to Craig and Mullins was based only on their request for a wedding cake and Masterpiece's own beliefs about same-sex marriage. Because Craig and Mullins never conveyed any details of their desired cake to Masterpiece, evidence about their wedding cake and details of their wedding ceremony were not relevant.

*20 ¶ 106 Accordingly, we conclude that the ALJ did not abuse his discretion by denying Masterpiece's requested discovery.

VII. Commission's Cease and Desist Order

[28] ¶ 107 Finally, we reject Masterpiece's contention that the Commission's cease and desist order exceeded the scope of its statutory authority. Where the Commission finds that CADA has been violated, section 24–34–306(9) provides that it “shall issue and cause to be served upon the respondent an order requiring such respondent to cease and desist from such discriminatory or unfair practice and to take such action as it may order” in accordance with the provisions of CADA. See also § 24–34–305(c)(I), C.R.S.2014 (The Commission is empowered to eliminate discriminatory practices by “formulat[ing] plans for the elimination of those practices by educational or other means.”).

¶ 108 Masterpiece argues that the Commission does not have the authority to issue a cease and desist order applicable to unidentified parties, but rather, it may only issue orders with respect to the specific complaint or alleged discriminatory conduct in each proceeding. We disagree with Masterpiece's reading of the statute.

¶ 109 First, individual remedies are “merely secondary and incidental” to CADA's primary purpose of eradicating discriminatory practices. Conners v. City of Colorado Springs, 962 P.2d 294, 298 (Colo.App.1997); see also Brooke v. Rest. Servs., Inc., 906 P.2d 66, 69 (Colo.1995) (observing that providing remedies for individual employees under CADA's employment discrimination provisions is merely secondary and incidental to its primary purpose of eradicating discrimination by employers); Agnello v. Adolph Coors Co., 689 P.2d 1162, 1165 (Colo.App.1984) (same).

¶ 110 Further, Masterpiece admitted that its refusal to provide a wedding cake for Craig and Mullins was pursuant to the company's policy to decline orders for wedding cakes for same-sex weddings and marriage ceremonies. The record reflects that Masterpiece refused to make wedding cakes for several other same-sex couples. In this respect, the Commission's order was aimed at the specific “discriminatory or unfair practice” involved in Craig's and Mullins' complaint. § 24–34–306(9).

¶ 111 Accordingly, we conclude that the Commission's cease and desist order did not exceed the scope of its powers.

VIII. Conclusion

¶ 112 The Commission's order is affirmed.

CHIEF JUDGE LOEB and JUDGE BERGER concur.

All Citations

--- P.3d ----, 2015 WL 4760453, 2015 COA 115