TALK TO YOUR SCHOOL: Go on your school's website and check to see what forms you will need to fill out before starting your club. Typically your schools leadership or Associated Student Body teacher can point you in the right direction if you are confused. You will also need to find a club advisor – a staff member who is willing to support your club and allow you to hold meetings in their classroom.

CONTACT THE ACLU: Let the ACLU of Washington know that you want to start a club. As you move forward with establishing a club, it is vital for you to keep in contact with the ACLU; and as the club gets going, communicate regularly with ACLU staff on upcoming event ideas. We can answer any questions that you have about starting a club, provide resources, and can help provide materials and sometimes food to your events.

Are you interested in creating an ACLU student club? You have come to the right place! To start off, here are a few common questions about clubs:

What is an ACLU student club? An ACLU student club provides an opportunity for students to come together to discuss and take action on current civil liberties issues, including ones that affect your school. The club is part of the ACLU (short for American Civil Liberties Union), which is a national organization with members and branches in every state. The ACLU is devoted to defending the Bill of Rights for all people in America. You can build community and strength by talking and working with other students, hearing each other's stories, and learning your rights as a student in Washington state.

What do student clubs do? Student clubs support the ACLU-WA's work by reaching peers and sharing know your rights information, hosting forums, coordinating educational events, and representing the ACLU-WA within your school.

Student clubs have organized events on a wide range of topics, including gender equality, racial justice, rights with law enforcement, censorship, technology and privacy rights, as well as drug policy reform. A few examples of educational events that other student clubs have hosted are:

- Screen short videos, followed by discussions with ACLU speakers;
- Host a Membership Drive (it's just $5 for students to join);
- Invite an ACLU speaker to discuss hot topics, such as drug policy reform, criminal justice issues, technology & privacy, government surveillance, and civil rights in schools.

How do I get started? Follow the pathway! These easy steps will help you create an ACLU Student Club at your school.

Pathway to Creating a Student Club

- 1) Talk to your school: Go on your school's website and check to see what forms you will need to fill out before starting your club. Typically your school's leadership or Associated Student Body teacher can point you in the right direction if you are confused. You will also need to find a club advisor – a staff member who is willing to support your club and allow you to hold meetings in their classroom.
- 2) Contact ACLU: Let the ACLU of Washington know that you want to start a club. As you move forward with establishing a club, it is vital for you to keep in contact with the ACLU; and as the club gets going, communicate regularly with ACLU staff on upcoming event ideas. We can answer any questions that you have about starting a club, provide resources, and can help provide materials and sometimes food to your events.

ACLU of Washington Student Club Guide

Thank you for your interest in starting an American Civil Liberties Union Student Club. These guidelines will help you stay organized, give you strong structure, and hopefully help your club grow!

Terms and Leadership Positions

A typical student club or Associated Student Body chapter will have the following leadership roles: President, Vice president, Treasurer, Secretary, and sometimes Historian. We have provided a sample list of those roles and job descriptions for each position. It is not required for every club to have this exact format, so plan your roles based on what is best for your club and school. Some common leadership roles can include:

- President- make sure the club is running smoothly, runs meetings, plans events, and keeps in contact with ACLU.
- Vice President- the person who helps the president with tasks and can fill in for them if they are absent. They will also take meeting/event attendance.
- Treasurer- will work on gathering and keeping track of materials like food, snacks, and supplies needed for meetings and events. ACLU can help support and bring resources to your student club, just ask them!
- Secretary- they fill in if President and VP are absent. They take meeting minutes, event reports, make announcements, and ensure PR is going smoothly.
- Historian- they will take pictures of events, help the secretary, and most importantly promote the club and its events.

At the minimum, we do recommend two people (such as president and vice president, or co-presidents) to run the club, and a few other reliable members to assist when needed.

It is also important to establish term length for all of the leadership positions. Typically, elections are held annually at the end of the school year. Though you can pick something different if it makes more sense at your school. Try to make sure that new leaders are in place whenever leaders graduate, so that the club can continue.

Expectations of Leadership

Student club leadership is expected to uphold their positions, enforce guidelines, and run their chapter smoothly. They must come up with a method for decision making such as majority vote or consensus-based decision making. Again, choose a method that is best for your school and chapter, but be consistent.

Expectations of Club Members

Club members are expected to follow the guidelines put in place by leadership, assist in event planning and outreach, promote the ACLU, and educate their peers on their civil liberties. They are also expected to respect and appreciate everyone's differences in and out of the club setting.

Meetings and Attendance

Meetings should be held on a regular basis at a time and place set by the officers and the staff advisor. Notice of meeting should be provided to club members in a timely matter. How regularly the ACLU club meets is up to leadership members. While we recognize students have many other commitments, we encourage attendance to every meeting possible.

Do's & Don'ts

Do's	Don'ts
Organize around Constitutional Rights!	Do not organize club activities on issues that aren't part of ACLU's mission.
Your student club should support and take action on initiatives or campaigns that ACLU has taken a position on.	The ACLU is a non-partisan organization which means it does not support political parties or endorse candidates for elected offices. Therefore, the ACLU requires that any activity that could be considered partisan is avoided.
Focus on civil liberties, activism, and events!	Do not focus on fundraising (for charities or other school-wide groups).
The ACLU defends individual freedoms such as: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Freedom of Speech & Assembly Separation of Religion & Government Freedom from Suspicion-less Searches & Seizures The Right to Due Process from Government Fairness in the Criminal Justice System Equal Rights under the Law for All People Privacy - Freedom from Unnecessary Government Intrusion 	Keep in mind the ACLU does not work on: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Foreign Policy War & Peace Economic Policy (including $15/hr. wage) Trade Policy Environmental Protection Taxation, Government Budgets & Funding Therefore, your club shouldn't either.
If an individual asks for legal advice, refer them to the legal advice hotline available on the back of our "Bust Cards", and on the ACLU of Washington website.	Do not offer your personal legal advice if someone asks for your help.

Event Ideas

Below is a list of possible events your club could host or attend, many of which other clubs around Washington have done in the past:

- Screen short videos, followed by discussions with ACLU speakers
- Host a Membership Drive (it's just $5 for students to join)
- Invite an ACLU speaker to discuss hot topics, such as drug policy reform, criminal justice issues, technology & privacy, government surveillance, and civil rights in schools (refer to Youth Programming sheet)
- Plan a rally for any current issue *
- Movie screening and discussion of some of the ACLU freedom files (you could have pizza/drinks/snacks/etc.)

- Screening of any movie on the suggested films list
- Plan a field trip for going to the ACLU-WA Student Conference
- Plan to attend a school board meeting that is considering a civil liberties issue

*Before you plan your rally, check in with ACLU to make sure the issue is relevant and non-partisan. Also, inform your school to see if any permits or licensing are necessary.
